GOP Raises Korea Issue In Final Plea For Election

War Developments Too Late to Affect Balloting, Is View Of Democrat Chiefs

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Republicans last night turned the spotlight on the war's serious turn in Korea as American voters heard their last campaign broadside and prepared to vote today.

At stake was the political complexion of the Eighty-second Congress and 32 Governors' chairs. America's direction in foreign affairs and in economic policies at home could hinge on the result.

In what looked like the closest off-year election in recent years, 36 Senate seats and all but three of the 435 House seats will go on the block.

Fair weather forecast across most of the Nation was expected to bring out a record vote, with some estimates ranging upward to 45 million.

On the chance that the voters haven't already made up their minds, Republicans keyed their closing statements to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's announcement that Chinese Communist troops have crossed into Korea.

Both Sides Concerned

Just as Democrats benefitted from recent brilliant Korean successes, Republicans seized on eleventh-hour war developments in a last pin-pointed effort to help tilt the congressional balance in their favor.

Politically concerned at the war's turn, Democrats nonetheless insisted that it came too late to materially influence election results. They stood pat on President Truman's Saturday night warning: "A vote for isolationism in this election would be a vote for national suicide."

A statement issued through Republican headquarters by four leading Republicans generally identified with the Vandenberg wing of the Republican Party, however, blamed the latest Korean crisis on "the Administration's policy of appeasement in the Far East."

The statement, signed by Senators H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), and Mrs. Wendell Willkie, widow of the GOP's 1940 Presidential nominee, charged lack of bi-partisan consultation on Far Eastern policies and said: "A Republican vote means a vote for a united American foreign policy."

"Ineffectiveness" of Policy

Saying MacArthur's announcement "presents a staggering issue that threatens all civilization," they plugged the present crisis hard, said it "brings out clearly the ineffectiveness of our United States foreign policy where it has not been a united American policy."

They echoed the right-wing Republican theme in this campaign that our Far Eastern policies have been dominated "by a small willful group in the State Department

Heavy Turnout Expected at Nearby Polls

Warm weather and some hot issues were expected to send an estimated 110,000 voters to the polls today in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Election Day is a State holiday in Maryland. Banks, liquor stores and schools will be closed for the day.

In Fairfax and Arlington Counties, and in the cities of Falls Church and Alexandria, polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Across the river, Montgomery and Prince Georges voting places will be open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Voting machines and paper ballots will decide these local issues:

Fairfax County: An estimated 10-12,000 county voters have in their hands the future of their own government.

Their ballots will ask these questions: (1) Shall the county change its form of government? and (2) In the event of such change, which form of government shall be adopted? Voters then have their choice of either the county executive or the county manager type of administration.

Today's balloting will climax one of the most hotly fought campaigns in Fairfax history.

Arlington County: Voters here will decide a crucial County Board seat and whether or not to borrow a total of $10,667,000 in bonds.

At stake in the board race is the present majority of political "independents" on that body, or possible control by a Democratic majority.

Two bond issue referenda—including one of $7,450,000 to build new Arlington schools—are expected to help draw as many as 16,000 county voters to the polling places.

The second Arlington bond is-

500,000 Due To Vote Today In Maryland

Half a million voters are expected to take matters into their own hands in Maryland today. They will settle:

1. Who's to be Governor for the next four years. The contestants, staging a return bout, are William Preston Lane, jr., the Democratic incumbent, and Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin, jr., former mayor of Baltimore, who is the Republican nominee.

2. Seven Congressional races. The big one is the contest between United States Senator Millard E. Tydings (D.) candidate for reelection, and John Marshall Butler, Baltimore lawyer who is the GOP nominee.

3. The makeup of the State Legislature and county governing bodies, including hundreds of individual offices.

Fair and warm weather, a perfect day for voting, is forecast for the whole of Maryland. The Washington forecaster said temperatures would rise to 60 or 65 over most of the State.

Polls in most of the State including the areas adjoining Washington open at 7 a. m. and close at 7 p. m. (In Baltimore the opening is 6 a. m. and the closing hour 7 p. m., and in two Eastern Shore counties, the opening time is 8 a. m., and closing time 7 p. m.)

Voters of Montgomery County adjoining Washington will have a hand in settling the Sixth Congressional District race between Representative J. Glenn Beall (R.) of Frostburg, and Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, USA, retired, Hagerstown, Democrat. Four other counties of Western Maryland (Frederick, Washington, Allegany, and Garrett) are in the district.

Voters in Prince Georges County will help decide the 5th

Truman Says Free Nations Will Prevail

Talks With Acheson But Avoids Mention Of War Development In IndependenceTalk

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Nov. 6.—President Truman said here in his home town today that the free nations surely will prevail against Communist "tyranny."

He made no mention of the new crisis in Korea brought on by the intervention of Red China, but warned Communist aggressors again that the United States and its allies would "oppose strength with strength."

Mr. Truman spoke twice today, at a luncheon and later at the dedication of a Liberty Bell given the people of Independence by the people of Annecy, France.

The Chief Executive recalled at the luncheon how the United States "ran out" on its responsibility back in the Wilson administration in 1920. He said it would not do so again.

"We have attained the position," he said, "which no other country in the world has ever had. We have not yet accepted the full responsibility of that position because it is new to us. We are really a young Nation, as generations count, but we are coming into our responsibility.

Cannot Neglect It Again

"We must exercise that responsibility along with the power that the Lord has given us, or we neglect to do what we are intended to do. We ran out on that responsibility in 1920. We can't do it this time, and we are not going to."

The Chief Executive talked to Secretary of State Dean Acheson on the telephone today. Newsmen were told that they discussed all aspects of the Korean situation, including Gen. Douglas MacArthur's accusation against the Chinese Communists and consequent developments in the United Nations.

Although Mr. Truman made no mention of the Chinese Communists in his speech, he said that "the threat of Communist aggression is a continuing menace to world peace."

Recalls His First Sweetheart

Aside from the sober phases of his talks, the years rolled back for the President today, here in his home town, and he recalled "a little, blue-eyed, golden-haired girl."

He said that little girl, Bess Wallace, still was his "sweetheart."

Mr. Truman tossed off his impromptu valentine to the First Lady just before starting the formal speech at the dedication of the Liberty Bell.

The Chief Executive, standing on the steps of the Memorial Building, could look across the street and see the old, red-brick First Presbyterian Church. Nostalgia took hold of him, and he said to a crowd of 5000 of his fellow townsmen:

"This is a great, great day for Independence. You know, I went to Sunday school right across

U.N. Council To Consider Korea Crisis

Special Wednesday Session Is Called After MacArthur Accuses Chinese

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 6 (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur notified the United Nations today that Chinese Communist troops are fighting United Nations forces in Korean. The United States promptly called for a special Security Council meeting Wednesday morning to consider this turn of events.

Council President Ales Bebler of Yugoslavia formally called the meeting for Wednesday and fixed the starting time at 10:30 a. m. EST.

The charge of Red Chinese intervention presented the United Nations with the gravest crisis in its five-year history, American Delegate Ernest A. Gross told a news conference: "The situation obviously is serious and will require consultations with other members."

At a tense Council meeting this afternoon Chief United States Delegate Warren R. Austin presented MacArthur's statement that "the United Nations forces are meeting a new foe" in Korea.

Based on Interrogations

Soviet Delegate S. K. Tsarapkin took notes as Austin read the detailed account of specific Chinese Communist formations that had been identified by MacArthur's intelligence officers. Much of the report was based on the interrogation of Chinese Red prisoners. It said 2500 Chinese Communist soldiers had moved into Korea as early as October 16.

The United States asked for no discussion of the case today. Gross explained that the U. S. delegation was holding private talks now with the diplomats of other nations. He declined to speculate on what proposals would be presented to the Council Wednesday. Asked whether Russia would be included in the preparatory talks, Gross said: "We won't rule that out."

Waiting Period Likely

Diplomatic sources said the 11-nation Council probably would be asked to issue an order repeating earlier U. N. calls to all nations to withhold aid from the North Korean Reds. This request could be worded so as not to name the Chinese Communists specifically.

After the issuance of such an order, the informants said, there probably would be some sort of waiting period to see if the Chinese Communists were pulling out of Korea.

Some observers thought the Council might call for a further investigation at the scene, even though MacArthur's report was in such complete detail as to eliminate all chance of mistaken identity.

There was corridor speculation that Russia might come forward with a cease-fire proposal coupled

Facts Held Insufficient

U. S. Stays Hand in Branding China as Aggressor in Korea

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The United States and its major allies were not yet ready yesterday to brand Communist China as an agressor in Korea. Facts so far reported from Korea were not considered enough to justify such a stand.

Although Gen. Douglas MacArthur has reported elements of at least four Chinese divisions on Korean soil, the units actually encountered have been of a battalion strength or less. The divisions themselves have not yet been found as organized forces.

This, presumably, was the information that Secretary Acheson relayed to President Truman yesterday when the President telephoned from Kansas City in search of news. Officials still had no clear indication that the Chinese Communists were bent on full-fledged intervention, although the situation had enough potentialities to send shivers down official spines.

Chinese Communist propaganda was blood-curdling in its attacks on the United States and in its hints of dire action to come. Nobody doubted that the Communist masters of China could, if they were mad enough, endanger the whole United Nations position in Korea by ordering their inexhaustible masses of manpower across the border.

In those circumstances American and allied diplomats, here and at Lake Success, were inclined to be cautious when they bring the situation to the attention of the Security Council on Wednesday.

A resolution now being discussed and drafted is expected to reaffirm the cease-fire appeal of June 25, and to call upon all countries to cease helping the North Korean aggressors.

The Chinese Communists will be told, directly or indirectly, that the new seven-nation U. N. commission will be in Korea about the middle of this month, and will be glad to discuss any grievances which Korea's Communist neighbors may have.

There may also be a reminder to Communist China that the United Nations is embarking on a huge reconstruction program to

20 Are Killed In Guatemala Airport Fight

Rebels Slain in Vain Attempt to Seize Military Field

Twenty persons were killed yesterday in what apparently was an unsuccessful revolt in Guatemala.

The dead were among a group of rebels who attempted to seize the military airport of the Central American nation's capital, Guatemala City.

The Associated Press reported that the Guatemalan government had quelled the uprising, led by a retired army officer, Col. Castillo Armas.

The rebels, it was reported, were repulsed by government troops from Fort San Jose, a garrison just across the road from the airport.

The clash lasted only an hour.

In Washington the Guatemalan Ambassador, Antonio Goubaud-Carrera, gave the 20 as the death toll in the fighting. Earlier reports had said 17 were killed.

The Ambassador said he had received a cable from his government stating that 50 persons took part in the uprising.

He added:

"The news is that outside of that, everything is tranquil."

Phone Parleys Fail; Strike Set Thursday

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP).—New conferences today failed to head off a national telephone strike, scheduled for Thursday, but both sides plan to meet again Tuesday.

After negotiating session between the Western Electric Co. and the CIO Communications Workers of America, a Federal mediator said company and union positions on wages, length of contracts and retroactivity were unchanged. Union officials have said, if they strike, 300,000 telephone workers will refuse to cross picket lines.

Douglas Urges End to French, German Feud

Two Nations Must Help Defend Europe Against Aggression, Envoy Says

LONDON, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Retiring United States Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas called on France and Germany tonight to end their historic feud so the West can weld a common defense against Communist aggression.

Lewis said both France and Germany must contribute to the defense of Europe, and he offered a compromise for the French who, fearing resurgent German nationalism, have opposed rearming the Germans, blocking Atlantic Pact defense plans.

Lewis said the presence of American troops in Europe would act as a safeguard, helping stifle any rebirth of the militant German spirit. The retiring Ambassador spoke at a Pilgrims Society dinner in his honor.

France, declaring she cannot allow West Germany to provide fully armed divisions as part of Europe's defense, has proposed instead creation of a European army into which smaller German units would be incorporated after France herself is strong militarily.

Each Nation Must Contribute

"If there is to be an adequate common defense, each nation, according to its abilities, strength and resources, must make a full measure of contribution," Douglas said. "If there is to be an adequate common defense, there must be a rapprochement between France and Germany.

"This ancient feud, which has so disrupted civilian living on so many occasions, must, and I suggest can, find an enduring reconciliation within the project known as the Schuman Plan."

Although final agreement has not been reached, both France and Germany are cooperating in the plan to pool Western Europe's coal and steel.

Douglas said a Franco-German reconciliation "can be made more solid by the separate prospect of a genuine international military

Withdrawals Of Foe Near Chongchon Puzzle Allies

U. S. Mustang Pilots Report Attack by Jet Plane From Inside Manchuria

SEOUL (Tuesday) Nov. 7 (AP).—Red troops in northwest Korea eased their pressure today and the U. S. First Corps reported limited withdrawals by forces facing the American Twenty-fourth Division.

But there was no indication the Chinese were pulling out of North Korea.

An expected big push by three to four Chinese-North Korean divisions failed to materialize. The lull and the Communist pullback had American staff officers puzzled.

A First Corps spokesman said there had been a noticeable withdrawal before United States Twenty-fourth Division troops holding a bridgehead across the Chongchon River in the Anju sector, 42 miles north of Pyongyang.

Regrouping Seen

The spokesman warned there still were large numbers of Reds in the bridgehead area. He said the Communists apparently were regrouping.

Streams of North Korean refugees poured across the Chongchon River into areas held by United Nations forces. The refugees said they feared Chinese Communist troops, air raids and ground fighting. Some 20,000 villagers had crossed the river.

At dawn today the Reds stabbed at the South Korean line about 4 miles northeast of Kunu, 47 miles north of Pyongyang. They were repulsed with the help of American artillery.

Associated Press Correspondent Jack MacBeth reported other enemy probing attacks at the center of the Allied perimeter north of Anju.

On the Korean northeast front Associated Press Photographer Frank Noel said the U. S. First Marine Division had identified three or four knocked out tanks as Russian-built and manned by Chinese Reds. Noel has been with leading Marine elements in the Changjin reservoir area.

Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton said the Marines killed 783 Chinese Communists Sunday and 800 on Saturday. A Marine Corps spokesman said more than 1500 Chinese Communist bodies had been counted.

United States air observers also had no indications of any Red withdrawal.

War News Sends Stocks Tumbling, Commodities Up

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP).—Stock prices tumbled today and commodities soared in swift response to ominous Korean war news.

Violent price swings were touched off by General MacArthur's charge that Chinese Communists had intervened in the North Korean fighting. The news created fresh fears that World War III was in the making.

A wave of selling swept over the stock market and prices dived $1 to $5 a share before holding. Selling pressure let up for a while and a few minutes before the close a lively rally started. Extreme losses were reduced in most cases.

A total of 1046 individual stocks declined out of 1227 traded. Only 56 advanced.

Dewey Conducts TV Marathon, Stays at Studio for 18 Hours

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey added marathon television today to the list of political campaigning devices.

Dewey, Republican gubernatorial candidate, showed up at a TV-converted riding stable at 6 o'clock this morning.

He expected to quit at midnight tonight, after having been adlibbing before the cameras for a total of 5½ hours—15 or 30 minutes each hour throughout the day.

WOR-TV's big studio in midtown Manhattan had the general appearance of an oversized and crowded smoke-filled room.

uents telephoned in their questions for Dewey to answer. At 5 p. m. more than 2600 queries had come over the lines—about half of them concerning the Korean situation.

Early this morning Mrs. Dewey entered the set, looking smart in an oxford grey suit with cinnamon-colored accessories. She handed her husband a carton of coffee and a copy of a newspaper.

In response to questions, Dewey several times remarked casually that he considered himself definitely out of the running as a presidential candidate. From time to time he walked to a dummy of a voting machine and demonstrated exactly how to cast a Republican vote.

The Governor also answered man-in-the-street questions brought in by TV crews stationed at points about the city.

Most questions were about war, but Dewey answered posers about taxes, social security and other matters.

"We have had," said a woman volunteer with great seriousness, "very few questions from screwballs."

Treatment of Sin Lies Outside Psychiatry, CU Cleric Claims

By Tom Schlesinger
Post Reporter

A Catholic University psychologist said here yesterday that "the treatment of sin as such does not fall within the scope of psychiatry, but that psychiatry may offer considerable assistance in its treatment."

Fr. Hayden

"Emotional distress due to sin can only be treated by spiritual means," the Rev. Dom James Jerome Hayden, M.D., said at the closing session of the thirty-sixth annual convention of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

"Otherwise the patient's conflicts will be aggravated if not multiplied," he continued.

"The analysis of sin is no cure of it, but the knowledge of its motivations and the significance of its expression can greatly help the patient to cooperate more fully with God's grace," he maintained.

The priest told an audience of 500 at the Statler Hotel that "if psychiatry and psychoanalysis . . . have as their chief objective growth in the field of moral responsibility, their findings must be cast in a religious framework.

"The lack of this framework has created the necessity for introducing religion into the field of psychiatry.

"The need for an appreciation of religion's role in psychiatric care is evident from the fact the

Bulganin Warns U. S. Of Korea 'Reverses'

MOSCOW, Nov. 6 (AP).—Deputy Premier Nikolai Bulganin tonight praised the Chinese Communists as a "mighty people fighting actively for peace" and indicated the belief that despite present military reverses, the North Koreans would finally emerge victorious.

Bulganin asserted it is time for the American ruling circles to understand the Russian people are "not weak-nerved and the Soviet people are not so easily frightened. The Soviet people are able to defend themselves and defend their motherland—with arms in hand if necessary."

Warns U. S. of "Reverses"

In a 12,000-word speech at the Bolshoi Theater on the thirty-third anniversary of the Soviet Revolution, Bulganin, a member of the Politburo, said the United States had "flung into Korea their entire Far Eastern armed forces and some of other (United Nations) countries. As a result of this, the Korean people suffered a measure of defeat at the hands of the interventionists."

But the former defense minister added that the United States had not smashed the will of the North Koreans, who heroically "fight on strongly for independence." Of the future, he said:

"Reverses occur in every war. At one time our Soviet state, too, during the foreign military intervention and the civil war, experienced enormous difficulties. However, the interventionists were defeated and driven out."

Banner for Oppressed

He declared that "recently the imperialists of the United States of America have moved from a policy of preparing for aggression to direct acts of aggression. The most naked manifestation of this policy is the armed intervention by the United States of America in Korea."

Bulganin said "Korea has become a banner for all oppressed people fighting for their liberation."

He complained that "all proposals made by the Soviet Union in the United Nations are constantly turned down by the U. S. A., and yet it is these who constantly try to make out that it is the USSR that talks of war and will not cooperate for peace."

The deputy premier recalled Prime Minister Stalin's contentions that "the existence of different systems need not prevent cooperation between nations and in particular with the U. S. A." and added:

"There is, of course, a difference between the desire to cooperate and the possibility of cooperation. The possibility always exists."

Assails Atlantic Pact

Bulganin assailed the Atlantic Pact and the proposed rearmament of West German forces which, he said, took into account only the Atlantic nations' interests and not those of the German people.

Bulganin declared that Soviet scientists have now "mastered the secrets of atomic energy." Russia has announced that she has solved the secret of the atom bomb and has atomic weapons at her disposal.

United States Ambassador Alan G. Kirk sent anniversary greetings to First Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs, Andrei Gromyko, for delivery to N. M. Shvernik, chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet. The message read:

"I have been instructed to convey through you to the peoples of the Soviet Union the best wishes of the people of the United States on the occasion of the national holiday of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

British Take 'Urgent' View Of China Acts

LONDON, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—A government spokesman announced tonight that the cabinet is giving "close and urgent" attention to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's charge that Communist China had intervened openly in the Korean war.

The cabinet, gravely anxious over the Korean situation and the invasion of Tibet, today began a review of its policy toward the Chinese Communist government.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, though he is suffering from a heavy cold, received United States Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas and Indian High Commissioner Krishna Menon to discuss the Korean and Tibetan situations.

Britain's position is embarrassing because the Labor government had recognized the Peiping government, and has urged its admission to the U. N., while at the same time it has troops fighting under MacArthur in Korea.

In answer to a Commons question, Foreign Undersecretary Ernest Davies said that the British charge d'affaires in Peiping "is in a position to make representations to the Central People's Government and can therefore bring His Majesty's government's views to that government's attention.

But from past experience, it was likely that any "bringing of His Majesty's views" to the attention of the Reds would be only to invite a diplomatic snub.

Earlier in the day Davies, also in answer to question, said of the Chinese invasion of Tibet:

"It would, of course, be ludicrous to suggest that Tibet was a threat to anyone . . . .

"The British government deplores this reverting to force by the Chinese government against a people who had no other wish than to pursue their traditional way of life without interference."

There were excited reports that the government might cancel its recognition of the Peiping government. But the most qualified sources said there was no possibility of such a cancellation right now. Bevin, for one, strongly opposes any "precipitate" action and wants to wait and see just what the Communists aim at in Korea—especially how far they are prepared to go in their aggression.

Would-Be Citizens Face Further Quiz Under New Law

Aliens in all parts of the country awaiting final naturalization papers have been asked to undergo a further quiz under the new internal security act, the Justice Department said yesterday.

Immigration and Naturalization Service officials asserted the further examination will "in a great majority of cases" deal only with literacy qualifications.

The new act, which made broad changes in immigration regulations, requires that aliens becoming citizens must be able "to read, write and speak words in ordinary usage in the English language." The old literacy rule required only a speaking knowledge of the American tongue, unless a physical handicap made this impossible.

China Reds Reported Putting Entire Country on War Basis

HONGKONG, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Chinese Communists began putting the entire country on a war basis today and there were indications that new mobilization decrees would be announced today.

Communist dispatches reaching here and all broadcasts by the Peiping radio hammered out the same recurrent themes:

1. The Chinese Communists will oppose "American imperialist aggressors" with concrete action, and

2. American use of the atom bomb will mean retaliation in kind.

There were reports of great troop movements northward. Chinese Nationalists said 400,000 Chinese Reds already had invaded North Korea and that the same number of reserves was massed on the border.

Chinese Communist vituperation against the United States was expected to reach a crescendo Tuesday—the thirty-third anniversary of the Soviet revolution.

Communist propaganda chief Lu Ting-yi in a special message commemorating the anniversary said, "American intervention in Korea signalizes an intention to invade China which must be defeated."

Celebration of the anniversary is expected to be the stage for renewed calls for mobilization and the announcement of new "volunteers" for service in Korea.

The Chinese Communist armies already are estimated at five million men of whom one million are in Manchuria. Peiping recently announced organization of 5,500,000 armed militia, bringing the country's armed strength to more than 10 million.

Peiping charged the United States was using Korea, Formosa, Viet Nam and Burma as "springboards for the invasion of China" and called on all Chinese to "go to the forefront to resist the Americans resolutely, support the Koreans and defend our homeland."

Peiping's latest charge was that American generals in Korea were "refusing to recognize the Yalu River as the border between China and Korea and were openly clamoring for a crossing of the river."

All indications from Red China indicated that Peiping was gearing for a maximum effort, with all industry in Manchuria being organized on a war basis and Manchurian residents digging air raid shelters.

Even Living in Sin, An Englishman's Home Is His Castle

LONDON, Nov. 6 (U.P.). — An Englishman's home is his castle even if he's living in sin. Britain has a planned economy, but it's leaving morals to nature.

A town council ruled an unmarried couple has as much right to a government-licensed home as a man and woman whose union has been blessed by the clergy.

The case arose in the Nottinghamshire town of Beeston, where an unmarried couple with a 4-year-old child moved into a home allocated by council. The Amalgamated Engineering Union protested that to allocate a home to persons living in sin when married persons lacked housing struck at the foundations of the home and state.

The council ruled, 13 to 4, that "we recognize their need can be just as real as that of a married couple."

Updegraff returned the $47.86, only to get a letter from the Government claiming that he actually owed tax money for 1943.

Russia Wants To Keep Grip, Rhee Charges

SEOUL, Korea, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—South Korean President Syngman Rhee, commenting on the presence of Chinese Communist troops in Korea, said today that "Soviet Russia does not want to lose North Korea entirely."

Rhee told a press conference any action against the Chinese Communists for invasion of North Korea must be by a decision of the United Nations commanders.

"When they come over the border we have to fight them," he said. "Our people realize if they do not fight we will be a satellite state. We must keep all of them from coming over the river."

He said South Korea had its own plans on what to do about the Chinese but hesitated to put them in action until consulting with the U. N. Asked who ordered the Chinese entry, Rhee replied:

"I think you'll have to ask the Chinese Communist government that. I think Soviet Russia does not want to lose North Korea entirely."

Rhee said his "personal views" was that the Soviet Union has been creating Soviet armies everywhere—"in Europe, America and Asia."

These armies may not be armed, Rhee said, but they are trained to fight against their own people and he implied they could be used in other countries as long as their doing so did not involve the Soviet Union.

More Study On Undulant Fever Urged

A strong plea for more and better organized research into one of man's chief miseries, brucellosis, was made here yesterday.

Dr. Martin M. Kaplan, veterinary officer of the World Health Organization of Geneva, Switzerland, stressed the needs before an opening session of the third Inter-American Congress on Brucellosis at the Interdepartmental Auditorium here.

Though only 4000 to 6000 cases of undulant fever (brucellosis in man) are reported annually in the United States, he said, investigators estimate the new cases each year actually number somewhere between 40,000 and 100,000.

He blamed a lack of standard diagnostic tests for failure to recognize the disease, which many of its victims simply call "the miseries."

The first-day delegates of a group which is expected to number 300 before the conference closes on Friday were welcomed by Dr. Alice C. Evans, president of the Inter-American Committee on Brucellosis. It was Dr. Evans who discovered in 1918 that the organism responsible for huge dairy and livestock losses in animals was the same one which produced undulant fever in man.

Israel Protests Suez Canal Blockade

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 6 (AP).—Israel charged in the Security Council today that the Egyptian blockade of the Suez Canal is costing her hundreds of millions of pounds.

Declaring that the "armistice agreement is being torn up as long as the blockade exists," Israel's delegate, Abba Eban, said his country "could no longer allow the matter to lie dormant."

Pressure Seen Rising For Selective Curbs

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Pressure in favor of imposing selective price controls on a few commodities, mostly metals, appeared to be growing yesterday in Government agencies concerned with economic mobilization.

High officials in the Council of Economic Advisers, the National Security Resources Board and the National Production Authority are indicating that nothing short of such direct action to fix ceilings can curb mounting prices.

In a published interview, NPA Administrator William H. Harrison disclosed he proposes to raise the question of price ceilings on steel with Alan Valentine, newly appointed Economic Stabilization Administrator.

Steel Order Coming

The copyrighted interview was published by United States News and World Report, a weekly news magazine. In it, Harrison discussed a forthcoming NPA order that will require steel producers to sell a certain amount of their production to warehouses supplying small and middle-sized steel users. He added:

"I do know that it is just good sense in a tight supply situation where the Government, in substance, makes it possible for a group of warehouse people to obtain products, that the Government would seem to have an obligation, through an established agency that has to do with price, at least to raise the question of price."

As a practical matter, it would be impossible for Valentine to move at once to set steel or other price ceilings. No price administrator in Valentine's agency has been appointed, and no staff has been assembled.

Certain Items Need Controls

On the other hand, however, once a price chief has been named, a few ceilings on basic commodities at their early stages of production could be set fairly quickly and with a small staff.

Government economists have pointed out that certain price rises—in tin, copper, aluminum, steel, rubber and some other raw materials—are hardly susceptible of control by indirect measures such as credit curbs and general deflationary methods. Instead, they may have to be tackled directly.

Harrison yesterday announced the appointment of Frank R. Creedon, former Federal Housing expediter, to organize a "facilities clearance staff" within the NPA to handle various types fo certificates that will come to NPA in connection with industrial plant expansion.

Creedon has held several Government jobs and has also served private companies as construction manager for atomic bomb plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Hanford, Wash.

In another action yesterday, the NPA gave the Atomic Energy Commission broader power to assign "DO" (defense order) ratings. A "DO" rating means that contractors and subcontractors must put the order ahead of nondefense orders.

The effect of the action is to permit "DO" ratings to be used in the building or operating of plants that serve the Atomic Energy Commission but are not actually owned or operated by that agency.

No Trace of Plane

D. C. Airman Missing in Korea Action

LIEUT. L. B. LONGSHORE
. . . No trace of plane found

A 23-year-old Army jet pilot from Washington was downed "over water" in Korea on October 19 and no trace of the plane has yet been discovered.

Lieut. Lamar Brindley Longshore, only son of Mrs. Nellie B. Longshore of 4014 Kansas ave. nw., has been listed as "missing in action" by the Department of Defense, his mother said yesterday.

Mrs. Longshore first learned that her son was downed on a solo mission for the Fifth Army Force when her sister, the wife of an Army captain in Tokyo, phoned last week.

The casualty section at the Pentagon verified the report on Wednesday, November 1.

Born in Gadsden, Ala., Lieut. Longshore attended Roosevelt High School here. He was a student at the University of Alabama before transferring to American University.

In February 1948 he joined the Air Force and a year later was commissioned at Williams Air Force Base in Phoenix, Arizona.

With the fighter squadron group at Langley Field, Va., he was sent to Korea in October.

Mrs. Longshore is secretary to the Military and Air Attache at the Egyptian Embassy.

Candidate's Pleas Go to 1700 Voters With Postage Due

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6 (AP).—A taxpayer objected today to paying 3 cents "postage due" on campaign literature mailed to him by Raymond O. Douglas, Republican seeking reelection as St. Louis county circuit clerk.

"This will never win friends and influence voters," the taxpayer wrote Douglas.

The officeholder checked with the postoffice and found that all 1700 letters he had mailed were marked "postage due."

Douglas said tonight he is going to mail a 3-cent stamp to all 1700 addresses and that he will use 1700 more stamps to mail these letters. It will cost him $102.

The bewildered Republican said postal workers had assured him that his original campaign letters required only 3-cent stamps.

He speculated that maybe someone with a butcher's thumb reweighed the letters.

'Mary' to Be Overhauled

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—The Queen Mary will be out of the Atlantic service for nearly five weeks while 1500 men work on her annual overhaul, Cunard officials said today. Her next voyage is scheduled for December 9.

Promotion Of Son Fools The General

Capt. Gruenther Gen. Gruenther
. . . Father and son story

For 17 of his more than 30 years in the Army, Lieut. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, the Army's deputy chief of staff for plans, carried lieutenants' bars on his shoulders.

So when the general wrote to his son, who has been a lieutenant only four years, he told him:

"You're probably wondering about a promotion and whether you're going to get one. My advice is to forget it. There's no chance."

The letter was written to Lieut. Richard L. Gruenther, who is in Korea commanding a company of paratroopers. It was mailed Sunday in Chicago, where the general stopped en route from Denver to his home here at Fort McNair.

When General Gruenther flew home a few hours later, the Associated Press called and startled him with news from Korea about his son.

Said A. P.: Maj. Gen. Edward Almond, commanding the Tenth Corps, had just pinned captain's bars on the shirt collar of the young officer. The battlefield promotion was for young Gruenther's leadership in combat.

And now there are two captains in the family—son Donald, two years older than Richard, is a captain now instructing at West Point.

Reds Reported 60 Miles From Tibet Capital

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 6 (AP). Chinese Communist troops thrust to within 60 miles of the Tibetan capital of Lhasa while advisers of the boy Dalai Lama debated whether to fight, flee or surrender, reports from the India-Tibet frontier said today.

The Kalimpong reports, published in the local press, depicted an amazingly rapid Red advance, considering the rugged terrain and bitter weather. The Communist column driving down from the north was last placed at Nagcuh Dzong 130 miles above Lhasa; the battalions coming from the east were last reported at Taicho (Giama Dzong), 115 miles away.

If true, the reports meant the Communists have covered the most difficult part of the invasion routes to Tibet. Last week a single spearhead was reported within 50 miles of Lhasa, but this was never confirmed.

The Indian government still did not have a clear picture of events in Lhasa. Breaking a silence of seven days, Dr. Sinha, official Indian representative, wired from Lhasa yesterday that the National Assembly was in tontinuous session as the Communist invaders approached.

Sinha, apparently, was waiting for the session to end before submitting a full report. The courses open to the Dalai Lama and the loyal members of his government were to flee to India, as did his predecessor in 1910; stand and fight, or meekly surrender.

The latter choice would undoubtedly be a hard one to make, because it is believed the Communists will depose the Dalai Lama and install the rival 13-year-old Panchen Lama, who has been in exile in China.

Snowslide Kills 1 In Mont Blanc Try At Plane Rescue

CHAMONIX, France, Nov. 6 (U.P.). One man was killed today when an avalanche of snow smashed into four mountaineers fighting up jagged Mont Blanc to the wreckage of a Constellation airliner that crashed Friday with 48 aboard.

Attempts to reach the plane were abandoned for the night after the leader of the trail-breaking party, Rent Payot, 42, was swept away by the slide.

Rescue planes reported no signs of life around the crumpled wreckage of the Air Indian plane that crashed into the 15,781-foot mountain, Europe's highest peak.

Hospitality for GIs Promised

Two surveys initiated this week should help the Armed Forces Hospitality Council's lodging committee to determine whether Washington is doing its best as host to servicemen on leave from nearby military posts.

One, an Army questionnaire reaching 1500 men, will ask if they feel recreation and lodging facilities now provided for off-duty time are adequate.

The lodging committee, meeting in the District Building yesterday, also proposed a survey to determine if military personnel "know" about the hospitality programs of the service centers.

Members of the committee—a subcommittee of the armed forces hospitality group, recently formed by District heads to provide services and assistance to men and women in uniform—began to review familiar World War II "canteen" procedures.

Capt. Robert M. Schmeltzer, of the special service headquarters for the Military District of Washington, said that buses are now on call to pick up men from service clubs. All it takes is a ring to the Fort Myer South Post duty officer, he reported.

Court Reduces Treason Charges Against 'Burma Surgeon'

RANGOON, Burma, Nov. 6 (AP). American Dr. Gordon S. Seagrave escaped a possible death penalty today when treason charges against him were reduced by a special tribunal.

The court, as the prosecution wound up its case, altered the charges against the "Burma Surgeon" and gave him the opportunity to refute three newly phrased charges that subject him to possible banishment for life or a prison sentence of up to 10 years.

Seagrave, who for a quarter of a century fought disease and trained doctors and nurses in Burma, pleaded innocent to each new count.

The amended charges are that he entertained at tea the Kachin rebel chief Naw Seng; that he gave the rebels medical supplies and free access to his hospital, and wrote threatening letters to prevent nurses' betraying his alleged rebel sympathies.

The tribunal will set a date Tuesday for resumption of the trial and Seagraves' defense.

identified Chinese Communists as being in the field against United Nations troops.

In aerial encounters, four American Mustangs shot down two Yak fighter planes Monday morning near Sinanju, on the extreme northwestern flank. The American planes were not damaged but one Mustang crashed on takeoff, killing the pilot.

A report of jet fighter planes crossing the Manchurian border came from United States Fifth Air Force headquarters, where a spokesman said a Russian-built MIG 15, latest known Soviet jet, attacked American planes near Sininju, on the Korean side of the Yalu River, opposite Anjung, Manchuria.

Fifteen MIGs have been reported over North Korea in the past week. This was the first time any was observed crossing the border.

Five Yak fighters strafed elements of the ROK Sixth Division near Kunu, on the northwestern front, at 5 p. m. Monday, but no casualties were reported.

On the key northwest Korean front, American forces regained about a half-mile lost to a Red assault at dawn Monday on the Anju bridgehead near the west coast. The bridge across the broad Chongchon River is the only Allied supply route northward in that area.

Elements of two United States regiments six miles north of Anju had been pushed back 1200 yards in a morning Red attack that was halted at 7 a. m. Two battalions of the enemy tried under cover of darkness to force a wedge between the United States 19th Regiment and the British Commonwealth Brigade.

An earlier enemy attack on that front Sunday night had been stopped by American artillery. Australian troops of the Commonwealth Brigade also blocked an assault by two Communist companies in heavy fire-fighting on the Allied left flank.

Marines Still Stalled

One hundred air miles to the northeast, United States Marines beat off a Chinese counter-attack south of the Changjin reservoir. The Marine Seventh Regiment's offensive was halted for the fourth day by heavy Chinese pressure, which the Leathernecks met only by desperate hand-to-hand fighting on the snowy approaches to the dam.

In northeast Korea, 60 air miles northeast of the Marines' positions, elements of the United States Seventh Division's 17th Regiment dug in along the chill south banks of the Ungi River nine miles above Pungsan.

They were only 24 air miles from the Manchurian border but in wild mountain country. They sent out patrols in weather 2 degrees below zero. No fighting was reported.

Near the east coast, elements of the Republic of Korea Capital Division advanced unopposed 18 miles beyond Kilchu, which they captured in battle Sunday.

This advance put the Republicans—farthest north of all U. N. troops—105 miles from the border of Soviet Siberia but in a comparatively unimportant area.

Several Small Fights

There also were minor fights at points well behind the Allies' northernmost lines, but the northwest front along the Changchon River remained the critical one for the time being.

Action was limited to see-saw sorties, including a thrust by a United States Second Division patrol to Tokchon, 35 miles northeast of the Anju bridgehead.

Other such operations included a Red attack on a reconnaissance patrol of the United States Seventh Division Monday noon east of the Pujon (Fusen) reservoir, just east of the Marine positions below the Changjin reservoir.

The Seventh Division's Thirty-first Regiment, which had landed at the east coast port of Iwon, moved inland an undisclosed distance to protect the rear and east flank.

Pujon reservoir is about 37 miles southwest of Pungsan and 24 miles northeast of Changjin reservoir. These two installations are parts of North Korea's important power grid.

Maj. Gen. Earl E. Partridge, Fifth Air Force commander, said six Red tanks were destroyed and 61 trucks and other vehicles were hit in American fighter-bomber operations in close support of the battle area along the north bank of the Chongchon River.

Five of the tanks were knocked out east of Yongbyon and one at Pakchon. Both towns are north of the Anju bridgehead.

An air spokesman said many enemy ammunition dumps hidden under haystacks were exploded in a general hammering of the area north of the Chongchon and up the highway as far as Sinhung, 20 miles northeast of Kunu. Pilots claimed 200 enemy troop casualties.

Use of Chiang Troops Is Urged by Knowland

OAKLAND, Calif., Nov. 6 (AP).—Sen. William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) urged today that Nationalist China's troops from Formosa be allowed to join the United Nations forces fighting the Communists in China.

In a telegram to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Knowland said Chiang Kai-shek's government offered 33,000 troops last July after the invasion of Korea but was turned down with the statement that the soldiers were needed for the defense of Formosa.

The "real reason" for refusing the offer, Knowland said, was the fear that the use of such troops "might furnish the excuse for the invasion of Korea by Chinese Communists."

"Since this has now happened anyway, General MacArthur should forthwith be authorized to accept with thanks on behalf of the United Nations the generous offer of the Republic of China. . . ."

Missing Girl, 17, Home; Ex-Teacher Held as Abductor

NAOMI, W. Va., Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Ann Tabor, 17, missing since her former high school teacher allegedly kidnaped her eight days ago, drove home in a taxi tonight, bruised and hysterical.

The buxom, pretty student nurse said Lewis G. Daniels, 35, divorced teacher, forced her to marry him in Boone County, Ky., several days after abducting her from a downtown Charleston street.

A few hours after the girl got home, Daniels was arrested at his father's store at nearby Surveyor, W. Va. He was charged with kidnaping. He protested he was unaware of the widespread search for him until last night.

The girl said she was forced to lie on the floor of Daniels' auto and was secreted in remote hotels while a police search for them was at its height. She said she escaped when he left her in a Beckley, W. Va., room.

Defense Setup For Alaska Pleases Hunt

Chairman Lester C. Hunt of a Senate preparedness subcommittee yesterday said he thinks Alaskan defenses are in "good shape" and "adequate" for the present.

The Wyoming Democrat had just returned from an investigation of Alaskan defenses by his Armed Services subcommittee. He told reporters "I don't think we need more ground forces" and "our radar protection is all-inclusive" in the Territory.

Hunt, who said he was speaking only for himself, said "the biggest problem is housing for our military people in Alaska."

"Housing accommodations are such that a farmer wouldn't use some of them for hog houses," he said.

Hunt added that he was impressed by the "all-inclusive" radar screen. He said it is so effective that it would pick up warning of an air attack "regardless of what direction it comes from."

The Senator, who leaves tomorrow for Denmark, said he was not a military expert and conceded "it might be well for us to have more air fields and planes, including bombers."

But on the whole, he said, Alaskan defenses are in "good shape" and morale "wonderful" among American forces.

Security Council to Consider Korea Crisis

with an appeal to the Chinese Reds and the U. N. troops to pull back and try to negotiate a settlement.

The obvious objection to such a suggestion, from the non-Communist point of view, is that it would leave the North Korean Reds in possession of a narrow strip of Korean territory despite the General Assembly's decision that all Korea must be unified.

Russia could be expected to veto any firm Council action against the Chinese Reds. Presumably this would throw the problem to the veto-free Assembly, which at this session has armed itself with emergency powers to combat aggression.

MacArthur's Report

MacArthur reported that troops in his command were continuing their drive northward to destroy the fighting effectiveness of the enemy and stated:

"However, presently in certain areas of Korea, the United Nations forces are meeting a new foe. It is apparent to our fighting forces, and our intelligence agencies have confirmed the fact, that the United Nations are presently in hostile contact with Chinese Communist military units deployed for action against the forces of the unified command.

"The continued employment of Chinese Communist forces in Korea and the hostile attitude assumed by such forces, either inside or outside Korea, are matters which is incumbent upon me to bring at once to the attention of the United Nations."

Asked by a reporter whether MacArthur might bomb bridges and other objectives inside Manchuria, Gross said the general had explicit instructions not to bomb any objective outside Korea.

MacArthur's report detailed the growing Chinese Communist participation in the Korean fighting. The 2500 soldiers who crossed on October 16 were identified as being from the Chinese Reds' Forty-second Army.

Four days later approximately 5000 troops joined the fighting. The report added that "a captured Chinese Communist soldier of this task force states that his group was organized out of the regular Chinese Communist Fortieth Army stationed at Antung, Manchuria."

In all, elements from seven divisions were identified in the report. Up to last Saturday 35 Chinese Communist soldiers had been captured.

Russian Move Puzzles

Elsewhere in the U. N. the Assembly's Political Committee was asked by Russia to approve a detailed definition of what constitutes aggression.

Observers were puzzled by the Soviet resolution, which appeared to be so sweeping in scope that it could be interpreted not only as a condemnation of the actions of U. N. forces in Korea but also of Communist China.

The resolution recognizes that "all states have equal rights to independence, security and defense of their territory." It states that no nation would be justified in invading another to put down a revolutionary movement, civil war, disorders or strikes. A country threatened by invasion would be allowed to take military preparations to defend herself so long as her troops were not sent across her frontiers. Committee debate in the next few days is expected to throw more light on the Russian proposal.

Firemen Use Derrick to Pull Horse From Well

Rockville volunteer firemen, given an assist by a Washington Gas Light Co. derrick, yesterday pulled a horse from a well on Rock Spring Farm near Norbeck, Md.

The 3-year-old gray horse had slipped into an abandoned well with his hind hoofs first.

The derrick, in use on a nearby project, was used to pull the animal out. Also aiding were employes of the Holland Construction Co.

A veterinarian said the horse's back was strained but that no bones were broken.

Douglas Urges End of Feud

and defense organization, subject to genuine political direction, which, under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, is so appropriately being considered."

Must Be Practicable

He said this system "must be practicable and effective" and "must firmly embrace permanent bastions against the resurgence of purely national German military might."

One of these bastions, Douglas said, would be "the historic and novel fact that my country's forces in time of peace will play a significant role in a cohesive, unified, international organization of the defense of Europe."

Douglas said the Atlantic Treaty represented the first time in history that the United States "formally by treaty has recognized its association with so many parts of the Old World from which it had come."

British to Buy Russian Grain With Sterling

LONDON, Nov. 6 (U.P.)—Britain announced tonight that it has concluded an agreement with Russia for 800,000 tons of coarse Russian grain.

The contract, negotiated in Moscow by representatives of the Food Ministry, comes into force immediately and shipments are expected shortly.

Payment for the grain supplies will be made in sterling, which Russia will be able to use for purchases of nonstrategic commodities—including wool and rubber—in the entire sterling area. But wool and rubber sales to Russia may be cut off if the Western powers agree to include these on a proposed "blacklist" of exports to Moscow or her satellites.

The amount involved on the grain pact was not disclosed but was estimated to exceed $40,000,000. The contract calls for 20 percent less grain than last year's 1,000,000 tons.

The Western powers are now negotiating a list of goods whose export to Russia and her satellites is to be banned or restricted for security reasons.

Authoritative quarters emphasized the Soviet grain pact involved only sterling payment and there was no obligation on Britain's side to sell goods to Russia. Dollar shortage had prevented Britain from buying the grain from dollar countries. The contract represents 20 percent of Britain's annual imports of coarse grain.

It was learned Russia was unable to supply Britain with more than 800,000 tons because of her own shortages.

Kemp Named Head Of Soil Committee

By The Associated Press

Dr. William B. Kemp, director of the Agricultural Experiment Station at the University of Maryland, yesterday was elected chairman of the State Soil Conservation Committee.

The action was taken at the first meeting the commitee has held since Dr. T. B. Symons retired this summer from his jobs as dean of the College of Agriculture and director of its Farm Extension Service. He also had been chairman of the Soil Conservation Committee.

Dr. Kemp has been acting chairman since the retirement of Dr. Symons and has been a member of the committee since 1943.

French Retreat Nearer Hanoi, Dig In on New Defense Lines

HANOI, Indo-China, Nov. 6 (U.P.)—French troops retreated from the treacherous mist-covered Vindau Mountains southwest of here today and dug in at new defense positions on the edge of the Red River delta, where they intend to make a stand against Ho Chi Minh's Communist army.

The French withdrawal began last week when six outlying posts beyond Hoa Binh, 33 miles southwest of here, were abandoned in the face of increasing rebel pressure. Hoa Binh itself was evacuated Saturday. The last and most dangerous phase, a 20-mile trek through jungle foothills, was completed today.

At the same time, the high command announced the evacuation of Hung Hoa and a satellite post northwest of Hanoi, reducing further the small Tonkin Province coastal area in French control. This is the "beachhead" comprised of the metropolis of Hanoi, the port of Haiphong and the rice fields on the fertile delta.

The high command spokesman said the Hung Hoa garrison had retreated to the east side of the Black River, near its junction with the Red, a point about 33 miles northwest of this Tonkin Province capital.

Due north and south of Hanoi, French defenses now run only 20 miles distant, just outside heavy artillery range, before broadening out to ring the delta. But nowhere is there a solid line; military maps, rather, look like broken jigsaw puzzles.

As retreats go, the Hoa Binh operation was perfectly executed. All three battalions pulled out with full equipment and without losing a man. Air cover was provided through the day and a paratroop battalion was ready to give extra protection.

Aid Recipients Face Cut in Civilian Supplies

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer yesterday revealed that foreign nations receiving United States aid will be asked to cut their civilian consumption to match American sacrifices.

He made the statement without elaboration in a copyrighted interview with U. S. News and World Report, weekly news magazine.

The interviewer observed that cutbacks in civilian production are being ordered here while "a good many nations abroad to whom we're shipping materials are not constricting their civilian consumption," and asked:

"What's going to be done about that?"

"We certainly are going to ask that," the Secretary replied. "We have a right to."

He did not explain what requests, if any, are being prepared for such cutbacks. Commerce Department officials said they had no idea what Sawyer had in mind. They knew of no such plans.

The United States and Canada, however, recently revived a World War II agreement under which both countries will cooperate closely on economic matters, including parallel moves to curtail the civilian output where this proves necessary.

Sawyer said more United States production is needed to provide goods for everyday living and the rearmament effort. He forecast an even larger expansion in steel production capacity than the industry has announced.

Major steel producers disclosed recently that they plan to hike capacity by 9,400,000 tons. To attain a total capacity of 110 million tons by the end of 1952. Some groups, both in and out of the Government, have criticized this as insufficient. A 120 million goal has been proposed.

Sawyer agreed that the 110 million-ton goal "is not enough for the future," but said "the element of time" is important. He said that an increase of four million tons in capacity a year if maintained, will lead to a 120-million-ton capacity in five years. And he added he thinks the yearly increase will "be even greater than indicated."

2 Fined for Littering Streets With Dollars

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (NYHT).—A man and a woman paid fines of $2 each today on charges of littering the streets—with $1 bills.

Police said Elliott H. Rose, a sales manager, and Miss Marie Bieser, his assistant, tossed approximately $800 in bills out of a midtown hotel window Thursday, causing a traffic tieup. Attached to each bill were a key and a zipper—an advertising stunt.

GOP Move Seen

Md. Election May Affect Tax Session

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6 (AP).—Theodore R. McKeldin said today the Republicans may spring some surprises at the special session of the General Assembly which Governor Lane has called for Friday.

The Republican gubernatorial candidate indicated the party's members of the legislature will have their own version of a bill to modify the sales tax—the job the session was called to do.

McKeldin also declared the Republicans will have a bill to change the present system of property assessments for taxes, which he called "unfair, unequal, and excessive."

The announcement of Republican intentions, Tuesday's elections, and the special session of the General Assembly three days later set the stage for some interesting action and reaction.

Governor Lane has called several special sessions during his four-year term now drawing to a close. In each case he has prescribed exactly what the session was to consider. In each case there has always been a welter of talk about how the Legislature was going to get out of hand and do a lot of other things, too.

This has never happened. The Lane administration has always been able to keep special sessions to the tasks it prescribed. Should Lane beat McKeldin tomorrow there should be little doubt that the Governor could keep a special session in line once again.

If McKeldin should win it might be a different matter.

The Governor set the Legislature but one task in issuing his call. He wants it to eliminate the State's 2 percent sales tax on all purchases under 50 cents. He also wants it to exempt from the tax a list of household necessities such as soap, semimedicinal items such as baby oil, and meals eaten in restaurants.

McKeldin said a Republican bill to modify the sales tax would "give the full relief I have already announced."

Congressional District race between Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D) of Upper Marlboro, and Thomas S. Carr, of Annapolis, Republican. (Other parts of the district are Calvert, Charles, St. Mary's, Howard and Anne Arundel counties, and some Baltimore city precincts.)

The candidates in two Congressional districts wholly contained by Baltimore City are 3d district. Representative Edward A. Garmatz (D) and Louis R. Milio (R) and (fourth district) Representatives George H. Fallon (D) and James W. Miller (R). The Fallon-Miller race is a return engagement, Miller having lost two years ago.

In the 2d Congressional District, Rep. William P. Bolton, of Dundalk (D.), is opposed by Brig. Gen. James P. S. Devereux, USMC, retired, of Stevenson, the GOP nominee. Their district takes in part of Baltimore City, plus Baltimore, Also at stake in the statewide voting is affirmation or repeal of the Ober (antisubversive law). A vote of "yes" is for upholding the act, and a vote "no" is for striking Carroll and Harford counties.

In the 1st Congressional District (the Eastern Shore), Rep. Edward T. Miller (R.) of Easton is opposed by State Senator Thomas F. Johnson (D.) of Berlin.

Riding with the question of who will be governor is that of who will be attorney general.

Lane's running mate is Hall Hammond of Stevenson, the incumbent; William A. Gunter of Cumberland, is the GOP nominee. Comptroller J. Millard Tawes (D.) of Crisfield, is unopposed for reelection.

Three Progressive candidates are on the ballot: Sam Fox for United States Senator; Thelma Gerende, for Congress from the Second District; and Marshall W. Jones, for Congress from the Fourth District. All three are in Baltimore.

Election Day Weather Good Throughout U. S.

The United States Weather Bureau predicted yesterday that today would be "just about as nice an election day as you could hope for" throughout the Nation.

The forecaster said the outlook was generally fair, wth moderate temperatures over most of the country. There will be some cloudiness, but the only threatened precipitation are snow flurries in the Lake Superior areas.

9 Seats at Stake

Light Vote Is Expected In Virginia

Virginians go to the polls today to elect nine members of the U. S. House of Representatives. Four of the nine are unopposed.

A light statewide turnout of about 100,000 has been predicted.

The Congressional delegation is now solidly Democratic.

Virginia voters in the area adjoining Washington will help decide the Eighth Congressional District race between Representative Howard W. Smith (D) of Alexandria and Tyrell Krum (R) of Vienna. Smith defeated Krum two years ago.

Also running in the eighth is Clarke T. Robb, Social Democrat, of Herndon.

In the ninth Congressional District at the western end of the State, the contest is between Representative Thomas Bacon Fugate (D) of Ewing, and George C. Sutherland (R.) Grundy attorney.

In the Seventh Congressional District, Representative Burr P. Harrison (D.) of Winchester is running against Jacob A. Garber of Harrisonburg, who in 1928 was elected to Congress over the father of his present opponent.

Representative Edward J. Robeson, jr. (D) of Newport News, has two opponents in the First District. The Republican candidate is Nile Straughan of Fredericksburg, and Stanley S. Garner of Newport News, is running as an independent.

Representative J. Vaughan Gary is opposed in the Third District by Mrs. Phronia A. McNeill, Progressive, and Mrs. Kathdyn Bernstein, Social Democrat. All three candidates live in Richmond.

Unopposed for reelection are Representatives Porter Hardy, Second District; Watkins M. Abbott, Fourth District; Thomas B. Stanley, Fifth, and Clarence G. Burton, Sixth.

Voters will also decide on two amendments to the State constitution. One would permit cities of 30,000 or more population to consolidate their courts under detailed plans set by the Legislature. The other would let the State Legislature consolidate adjoining school systems of a city, a county or adjoining counties.

Korea Air Mail Resumed

Hot Issues to Draw Heavy Vote in Area

sue, one for $2,617,000, would pay for an improved county sewage treatment plant, capable of caring for a community of 200,000.

An estimated 900 voters in the city of Falls Church will decide still another "issue"—shall the city attorney continue to be appointed by the city council or shall he be an elected official?

In Alexandria, a voter turnout as high as 6000 is being predicted on a related issue. The question: Shall the city attorney and the city collector continue as elected officials or shall they be appointed in the future—the collector by the city manager and the attorney by the city council?

The referendum, provided for by the last Virginia General Assembly, has aroused little controversy to date.

Smith Seeks Reelection

Residents of the nearby Virginia area, part of Virginia's Eighth Congressional District, also will vote for that seat in the United States House of Representatives. Representative Howard W. Smith, the Democratic incumbent, is facing Republican Tyrell Krum of Vienna and Social Democrat Clarke T. Robb of Herndon.

In nearby Maryland candidates rather than "issues" will be watched in today's voting.

In Montgomery County some sources predict a vote as high as 45,000.

In Montgomery, Democrate are making a bid to break a hold by Republicans and charteries on the county government and oust the all-Republican delegation in the Legislature.

The county charter committee has indorsed all six GOP candidates for the Montgomery County Council, and also crossed the party line to support two Democratic candidates.

Also at stake are one seat in the State Senate, six in the House of Delegates, the post of register of wills, three judges of Orphans Court, and the posts of State's attorney, clerk of Circuit Court, sheriff, and surveyor.

Montgomery voters also will decide, in a local referendum, whether to lower from 10 to 5 percent of qualified voters the minimum number of petitioners required to put a county measure to a referendum.

A vote of between 30,000 and 35,000 is predicted.

In Prince Georges County, Republicans, who hold no county executive office, hope to break the ice.

One bone of political contention is the Sothoron Act, which reorganized the county government. It has been praised by the Democrats and attacked by the GOP candidates.

At stake in Prince Georges are one State Senate seat, six seats in the House of Delegates, five County Commissioners, three Judges of Orphans Court, and the jobs of State's Attorney, Sheriff, Register of Wills, Treasurer, Clerk of Circuit, and County Surveyor.

Democrats and Republicans are contesting each other for all save the County Surveyor's post, for which the Democratic candidate is unopposed.

Residents of both counties also will help elect a U. S. Senator, Maryland's Governor and State Attorney General.

Montgomery residents also will have a part in naming the Congressman from the 6th District Congressional District and Prince Georges voters will help pick Congressman from the 6th.

Korea Issue Raised On Eve of Election

intent on appeasing the Chinese Communists" and said this has built up Communist strength and "dragged the Chinese people behind the Iron Curtain.

"The Russian Communist government must be told in no uncertain terms that we understand now the dangers of her insidious propaganda and we, acting through the United Nations, should immediately announce that we propose to halt once and for all the further spread of this Communist poison," their statement continued.

It was the fifth major Republican broadside on the Korean war's turn in three days.

Earlier, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, in a horse race for a third term as Governor of New York, said America could have averted "this very great tragedy . . . if we had supported Chiang Kai-shek and had not let his government fall, or if we had not cleared out of Korea."

Replying to President Truman's solo attack on Republican isolationists, Harold Stassen on Saturday accused the Administration of "coddling" the Chinese Communists.

Republican National Chairman Guy Gabrielson and Senator Robert A. Taft, fighting a battle for survival with organized labor in Ohio, tied their closing appeals for votes to the same Korean theme.

Up to the very eve of the election, the outcome was tinged with more doubt than is usual in an off year. Since 1934, light voting and mid-term resentments against the party in power have usually resulted in Republican gains.

This year, however, Democrats, keying their campaign to a "Peace and Prosperity" slogan, are predicting with increasing vigor that they stand a good chance of increasing their Democratic majorities in both houses. At the worst, they have maintained, they won't lose more than one or two Senate or 20 House seats.

Republicans, on the other hand, have been unusually modest in their claims. None have flatly predicted GOP control of either House. Their forecasts generally call for a minimum Senate pick-up of four or five seats and a House gain of 25 to 30.

The present Senate political lineup is: Democrats 54, Republicans 42. Needed for control 49, or a Republican net pick-up of seven seats.

The present House division is: Democrats 259 plus three vacancies normally Democratic; Republicans 169 plus three vacancies normally Republican; American-Labor one; needed for control 218, or a Republican net pick-up of 46 seats.

Democrats now have a majority of the Governors, 29 to the Republicans' 19.

Out of 98,000,000 potential voters only about 70,000,000 are qualified. If normal off-year voting patterns are followed, only a little better than half of these will turn out.

Some of the still doubtful contests:

OHIO. Senator Taft, his party's "Mr. Republican," is opposing not only Joseph T. Ferguson, diminutive state auditor, but united labor opposition.

ILLINOIS. Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (D.) is opposed by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R.), who was tabbed an isolationist by President Truman. Main threat to the whole Illinois Democratic ticket are the Chicago "rich cop" scandals involving the Democratic candidate for sheriff.

UTAH. Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D.), a consistent New Deal and Fair Deal supporter, is being hard pressed by William F. Bennett, 1949 president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

COLORADO. Senator Eugene D. Millikin, one of the leading Senate Republican policy-makers, is in a neck-and-neck contest with one of the leading House Fair Dealers, Representative John Carroll (D), who cast one of the few House votes against the McCarran antisubversive bill.

CALIFORNIA. Representative Richard Nixon (R), who helped unearth Whittaker Chambers' "Pumpkin Papers," has been riding the "Red Issue" for all its worth against Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas, Democratic liberal.

CONNECTICUT. Senator Brien McMahon (D), chairman of the Congressional Atomic Energy Commission, is running out front for the "atom vote" against former Republican Joseph E. Talbot. Here Republicans hope to make it a daily double by defeating both McMahon and Senator William Benton, running for a two-year term against Prescott S. Bush (R.).

Ober Law Test Again Rejected By High Court

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday for the second time refused to consider Maryland's Ober law—the antisubversive measure on which the State's voters will cast ballots Tuesday.

Two weeks ago the court, by a 6-to-3 vote, refused an immediate hearing to Louis Shub, a Baltimorean who had been barred by the State from getting his name on today's ballot for Governor because he refused to take the loyalty oath.

Yesterday's action was thus a reaffirmation of the earlier action. It did not constitute a ruling either way on the constitutionality of the controversial law.

In an unusually dull day, the high court also:

1. Refused to review the contempt-of-Congress conviction of Richard Morford, executive director, National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc. He was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $250 for refusing to give the House Un-American Activities Committee records of his group.

Morford last spring won an appeal from an earlier conviction in the same case when the Supreme Court ordered a new trial because of restrictions on his attorney at the first one. But he was again convicted. Yesterday's action was on the second conviction.

2. Agreed to consider two cases involving Wisconsin's antistrike law for public utilities, similar to another case already accepted for argument. The two new cases involve an AFL streetcar union, while the previous one concerned the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers Union, CIO.

3. Agreed to rule on an Indian land claim case that the Government says could bring on other claims totaling more than 14 billion dollars. Involved are various bands of Tillamooks and others in Oregon. The Court of Claims has ruled they are entitled to more than 17 million dollars for tribal lands taken from them as far back as 1855.

4. Unanimously rejected a claim for $328,804 by Inland Waterways, Inc., of Duluth, Minn., against the Government for asserted losses on World War II naval contracts. Justice Minton wrote the opinion.

5. By 5-to-4, reversed a Missouri court ruling in two suits involving the Federal Employers Liability Act. The issue was over proper jurisdiction. Justice Frankfurter wrote the majority opinion, joined in by Justices Reed, Jackson, Burton and Minton. Justice Clark dissented and was joined by Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Black and Douglas.

MOMENT OF TENSION—President Truman and his sister, Miss Mary Jane Truman, look apprehensively from the window of their car in St. Louis Sunday after a falling screen made police fear, for a moment, another assassination attempt. The screen, falling from a hotel window, landed with a bang about 20 feet away. Secret Service guards flattened themselves against the automobile to shield it and the 100 policemen in the area drew their guns

Collazo Murder Case Goes To Grand Jury Wednesday

A Federal grand jury on Wednesday will begin hearing 23 witnesses in the first-degree murder case against Oscar Collazo, one of two Puerto Ricans who tried to assassinate President Truman.

Assistant United States Atty. John W. Fihelly said he expected a "quick indictment." It may even be in a special return by the end of the week, he said.

Pvt. Leslie Coffelt of the White House Police and Griselio Torresola, Collazo's fellow conspirator, were killed in the shooting affray last Wednesday outside the Blair House. The 37-year-old Collazo and two guards were wounded but are recovering.

May Name Lawyer Today

Earlier in the day, Judge Edward A. Tamm of District Court said that he would appoint an attorney to defend Collazo on the first-degree murder charge. He planned to make the appointment during the day, but the decision had been delayed. It may be forthcoming today.

Last Friday Judge Tamm appointed Attorney William E. Leahy to act as an "officer of the court" to interview Collazo and to advise him concerning his rights to an attorney.

Leahy reported that he called on Collazo, who is under close guard at Gallinger Hospital.

Wife Pleads Poverty

Leahy said that Collazo at first said he wanted his wife to get him a lawyer, but that if this was impossible he wanted court-appointed counsel

The court was told that Mrs. Collazo, who is imprisoned on $50,000 bond on conspiracy charges, stated she had no money and that her husband probably did not know that she is in jail.

The body of Torresola was returned to New York for burial. The FBI overruled his family's plans to put the body on public display, it was reported.

Funeral services will be held in Brooklyn during the day, and the body will be shipped to Puerto Rico for burial there, according to the State Department.

12 N. Y. Dailies 'Package' Plan

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP).—Local 6 of the AFL International Typographical Union—New York City's "Big Six"—printers union—today rejected a $7 wage increase "package" proposal submitted by a Federal mediator to both the printers and the publishers of 12 New York City daily newspapers.

Five other printing craft unions accepted the proposal in membership meetings and three craft unions still must vote on it.

The "package" proposal called for an immediate weekly wage increase of $3.50 plus a $1.50 contribution to the welfare fund.

The personal letters of F.D.R. covering the years 1928-1945, will be published for the first time in 30 installments in The Washington Post. Sunday, November 12, is the date of the first installment.

Milestone in a Career!

We see it happen over and over again—and it's one of the greatest satisfactions we enjoy in this happy business of selling Cadillac cars.

It's when a man comes into possession of his first Cadillac—and we witness the wonderful, wonderful things it does for him.

We see his happiness as he places his order—not as the result of a sudden inspiration, but because he has gradually reached the conclusion that he has earned the right to the unquestioned best. A Cadillac buyer has his mind made up when he starts to move.

And then we see him on that happy day when his car is available for delivery—and he settles himself so proudly behind the wheel.

He's a little quizzical, we sometimes note. Could it be, he wonders, that he's anticipating a bit too much?

And then he's out in the street—headed for home the long way 'round. There are some things a man wants to try for himself—with no one near to watch him!

Those are thrilling days that follow.

There's the first long ride with the family ... the first trip to the office, with a waiting delegation to admire his choice ... and there's the time he learns, in an emergency, that his car is worth its whole price in safety alone.

And then, almost before he knows it, the odometer registers a thousand miles—and he's back to tell us all about it. And, perhaps, to grumble a little bit at giving it up for a checking over. It's hard to part from a great new love, even for a little while!

Yes, it's a priceless privilege to watch all this. Makes a man feel that he's doing good.

CU Professor Defines Role of Psychiatry

patient must live with his religious principles after he has left the psychiatrist's care," Father Hayden said.

He characterized the mental health of its members as "one of the greatest problems facing the Catholic Church."

Father Hayden said it is "fairly common experience to find a religious coloring of the mental content of patients suffering from both minor and major mental disorders.

"In schizophrenia," he went on, "we find a logic which . . . shows an intuitive understanding of symbolism.

"Such a patient spontaneously, and as a matter of course, makes symbolic interpretations. Symbolization is the displacement of emotional values from one object to another . . . Catholic patients who are fairly well instructed in our holy faith and their symbolic representations are rendered susceptible to weird distortions of the spiritual life by the employ of such symbols in the life of fantasy."

He said the depressed person, depending on the depth and severity of his depression, most often had doubts of faith, rebellion against God, disbelief in God, despair and suicidal tendencies.

"Guilt feelings," the priest declared, can only be understood in terms of superego . . . which begins to develop about the third or fourth year as a consequence of establishing relations with our parents.

"Defiance often can be traced back to our parents and their ideals or to our early religious training."

Another type of "mental disorder" cited was the "obsessive or compulsive personality" who is "extremely rigid, meticulous, punctilious and fastidious . . .

"Because of the adult's religious belief in the omnipotence of God, his unconscious childish attitudes of omnipotence of his parents will by association release from the patient's unconscious all the hostile feelings he has toward his punitive parent.

"These feelings," the priest continued, "that were meant for the parent are directed toward God so that there is scarcely a case of compulsion neurosis in which there is not found such religious features as conflicts over faith and impulses.

"Likewise, in some patients one sees a strong tendency to ceremonial or ritualistic behavior in spiritual exercises.

"There is a strong inclination on the part of priests and ministers to believe that religious counsel, piety and devotion will serve as both prevention of and cure for neurosis.

"Actually," Father Hayden remarked, "mental disease as such has nothing to do with what is commonly referred to as spiritual life.

"Though the moral and spiritual life of the individual is often seriously involved in mental illness, such involvement is only too frequently the outcome of profound unconscious conflict and not the cause of it.

"If mental health is to be maintained it will be through conscious mastery of our instinctual and emotional life, not through repressing it into the unconscious.

"Therapy for the Catholic psychiatrist or psychoanalyst must be aimed at helping the patient to bring about those subtle internal changes in feeling an emotion, in insight and volition which are not directed toward the outer world."

A "widespread distrust for the field of psychiatry and psychoanalysis, especially among Catholics" is due in part to "confusion and misunderstanding of these two branches of medical science and what they have to offer in the prevention and treatment of mental ills," he said.

However, Father Hayden said, "There is some reason for a lack of confidence because of the materialism which analytical psychology has inspired within these fields."

Officers Elected

Three Washington residents were elected officers in the final business session. They were Sister Serena, superintendent of St. Vincent's Home and School, 4th and Edgewood sts. ne., first vice-president; The Right Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady of Catholic University, secretary for his thirty-first consecutive term, and Harry J. Kirk, of 1404 Otis st. ne., treasurer.

Others named: The Right Rev. Vincent W. Cooke, of Chicago, president; the Rev. Andre M. Guillemette of Montreal, the Right Rev. Msgr. James J. Lynch of New York, Robert F. Lyons of St. Louis and Miss Lucille Kennedy, of Sacramento, all vice-presidents.

The Very Rev. Msgr. John J. McClafferty, dean of the National Catholic School of Social Service, Catholic University, was among five named to three-year terms on the board of directors. Miss Florence Murray, assistant director of Catholic Charities of Washington, was picked to fill the unexpired term of Kirk on the board.

Women to Play Vital Civil Defense Roles

"There will be plenty of opportunity for women to work in the District's civil defense program," Inspector John E. Fondahl, acting director of civil defense, declared last night.

Speaking at a meeting of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, Fondahl said women air raid wardens "will have to bear the burden during the day while the men are working." And the welfare work, he added, will be carried out chiefly by women volunteers.

There are no plans yet for women volunteers, said Fondahl, but meetings will be held at six locations November 18 to start the civil defense warden service.

Fondahl outlined civic defense plans last night and Association President E. G. Bliss said criticism that the program is going too slow is unjustified. "We shouldn't rush into these things," said Bliss. "Only a gradual approach is sound."

Former District Commissioner Louis Brownlow told of the defense setup in World War I and how it aided in the flu epidemic of 1918.

National Gateway

The National Gateway Citizens Associated last night voted to request installation of a traffic light at South Dakota ave. and Bladensburg rd. ne.

The group heard a report that a recently requested traffic light has been installed at Eastern ave. and Bladensburg rd. A nominating committee was selected last night to name candidates for the elections at the December meeting.

Michigan Park

The Michigan Park Citizens Association voted last night to oppose the rezoning of that area bounded by Hamilton st., Eastern ave., Sargent rd. and Gallatin st. ne. as a Class A commercial zone.

The association will file a brief stating its opposition with the Zoning Commission, which has received a petition requesting the rezoning.

Appointment of standing committees was completed at last night's meeting.

Southwest Citizens

Morris Engle, owner of Harrigan's Restaurant at 729 9th st. sw., moved up from first vice president to president of the Southwest Citizens Association last night.

Engle succeeds Frank Hurst. Others elected were Robert Boucher, first vice president; Mrs. Thelma Morgan, second vice president; Lloyd Jones, recording secretary; Mrs. Rose Paper, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Pearl Wyne, treasurer.

Meeting at the Southwest Branch Library, the group approved the proposed widening of Independence ave. near the Capitol grounds. A special meeting was ordered at 8 p. m. Thursday at the library to discuss plans for a Christmas party.

Progressive Citizens

The Progressive Citizens' Association of Georgetown last night asked zoning officials to deny "any encroachment" of commercial zoning adjacent to the Lad Mills service station at Wisconsin and Q sts. nw.

The request referred to the proposed rezoning of a strip five feet by 70 feet adjacent to the station on the south side of Q st.

Other business at the meeting at Christ Church, 31st and O sts. nw., included the announcement of committee appointments by Grosvenor Chapman, recently elected president.

Manor Park

The Manor Park Citizens' Association last night authorized a written protest to the Capital Transit Co., after hearing complaints of curtailed bus service in the area.

Members told the meeting at the Whittier School that they had noticed a dropoff in service on the K-6 line to Takoma and the J-1 line to Manor Park during the morning rush hours and on Saturday.

The group also authorized a letter to the Washington Gas Light Co., approving the company's fight against an increase in rates by its wholesale supplier.

In another resolution, the association asked the abolition of the rule requiring consent of a majority of home owners before a street is paved.

Praise of Limon Dancers Highly Justified

By Paul Hume
Post Reporter

Jose Limon and his Dance Company returned to Lisner Auditorium last night.

Their appearance a year ago won them praise from those fortunate enough to see him. It proved praise highly justified in last night's concert.

The finest work Limon exhibits is still his powerful and penetrating Moor's Pavane. This study in the theme and character of Othello is a unique work, conceived in the highest creative spirit and executed in peerless fashion.

It is wedded to music of Henry Purcell—music that matches its growing tension and classic style in superb ways. And as a dance vehicle, the Pavane provides four sensitively balanced dancers unparalleled chances for intimate work as artists and dancers in an ensemble not found in other dances today.

The power and imagination of Limon's Moor is countered with the sinuous subtlety of Lucas Hoving's malignant Iago. And to match the innocence of Betty Jones as the most unjustly served of wives is the thrilling pace of Pauline Koner's Emilia.

Limon has not found in any of other work quite the same kind of polished art as his Pavane shows. His Concert, set to several of Bach's Well-Tempered Preludes and Fugues, sets forth the spirit of the music in handsome abstract patterns. These designs often attract the eye, but it would be hard to say that they approximated the mood of the fleeting figures Bach wrote. Some do in good measure. Others fail, principally in trying to be too explicit about another art form.

Day on Earth is the work of Doris Humphrey. Limon's companions found it the chance for some of their more impressive dancing. Ruth Currier could not ask for a finer role than that of the young girl she projected with such sympathy and vivid feeling.

The dance as a whole is obscure, even though it leaves a sense of unified intention at its close. La Malinche, for a piece so close to Limon's mind and heart, strikes one as obvious, musically, to the point that it suffers from its score. As a dance conception its weaknesses in repetition and monotony outweigh its moments of strength.

AMITONE works on an entirely new principle . . . gives you thoroughly effective, safe, long-lasting relief for acid stomach distress! The secret of the amazing effectiveness of this new "Wonder Drug" is the costly amino acid known as Glycine. How AMITONE Relieves And Automatically Regulates AMITONE's patented formula works two ways to bring relief. First, because it contains the safest, fastest acid neutralizer known, it immediately relieves the pain caused by the pressure of excess acid stomach gases on the sensitive cardiac end of the stomach (see arrow). Second, it continues the relief longer because wonder-working Glycine as used in AMITONE acts as an "automatic regulator," keeping the digestive juices at the "good digestion" level for longer periods of time.

Glycine Does More

The Glycine in AMITONE makes it impossible to overalkalize, protects you against alkalosis or "acid rebound" no matter how many tablets you take. AMITONE is completely safe, will not constipate or cause laxation. Won't rob the stomach of digestive enzymes.

"Faith Of Our Fathers"

About 50,000 persons have seen Paul Green's impressive drama, "Faith of Our Fathers" in the Rock Creek Park Amphitheater built especially for its presentation as one of the major Sesquicentennial observances. Considering the fact that it got a very late start, was inadequately publicized and was dogged by a good deal of bad weather—there were only 43 performances altogether—this reflects a widespread popular interest. The comments of many District residents and visitors to the Capital who saw the production indicate that it evoked a great deal of enthusiasm.

Many people who have not yet seen "Faith of Our Fathers" would undoubtedly like to do so. We heartily share, therefore, the hope expressed to Carter Barron the other day by President Truman that performances of the play will be resumed in the amphitheater next spring. They would afford a most welcome and valuable form of entertainment for Washingtonians. And at the same time they would provide a magnetic attraction for tourists from all parts of the country and, for that matter, from overseas as well. There is every reason to make a show patterned along the lines of "Faith of Our Fathers" a permanent feature of Washington life. No better use could be made of the amphitheater.

One note of caution ought to be sounded, however. If the Sesqui players continue their presentation of "Faith of Our Fathers," let us hope that they will never again be subjected to the stupid humiliation they suffered at the Anacostia High School last month. Fear that a few hoodlums among the students might misbehave led the school principal to deny use of the school stage for a performance of the play because the cast included both white and Negro actors. The Baptist Ministers Conference of Washington urged the District School Board on Thursday to reverse its decision supporting this ban. Its plea should be heeded. "Faith of Our Fathers" is an American saga. It has a lesson in essential Americanism for all of us, the members of the school board included. We urge the Sesquicentennial Commission to continue it.

Official Spokesman

It is not often that the Associated Press is roused to protest. The other day, however, in the person of one of its staff writers, James Marlow, it indulged in what, considering the sobriety of the source, can scarcely be characterized as less than a remonstrance and might without too much exaggeration be called an outburst. The subject of Mr. Marlow's discontent was the prevalence of "official spokesmen." An "official spokesman" may be defined as an anonymous character who speaks unofficially for officials who do not wish to speak. He operates under a variety of aliases, all of them familiar to readers of news pages —"informed source," "authoritative circles," "high Government officials," etc., etc., ad libitum.

The function of the "official spokesman," under whatever name, is somewhat analogous to that of the medium in a spiritualist seance who facilitates communication between mere mortals and the celestial realm. Officials who wish to send messages to the common people and yet shrink from being quoted or from assuming responsibility for what they say are fond of using the "official spokesman" as an intermediary. Alternatively, if they consent to speak in propria persona, they open the seance with a warning that the information they are about to impart is "for background purposes only and not for attribution to the speaker." It is, as Mr. Marlow so aptly put it, "quite a device for pumping stuff out to the public."

There are, of course, legitimate uses for off-the-record press conferences and confidential background talks by Government officials. These serve often to give newspapermen invaluable insights into emergent problems on which official statements might at the moment be inappropriate. But to employ the device for the purpose of launching trial balloons or to give currency to tendentious accounts of political events or to influence opinion by statements that may later be repudiated is to play fast and loose with the public as well as with the press. Reporters pride themselves on their reputation for keeping confidences. Nowadays, however, they need to beware of accepting them. There can be no fixed rule in these matters, and no doubt the "official spokesman" will continue to use and sometimes to abuse his unofficial position. He ought to be feared even when bearing informational gifts.

Neglect No Means

It is not enough to rest content with the roundabout MacArthur warning to Communist China as a deterrent to the spread of warfare in the Far East. His communique is incomplete; it should be followed by a solemn pledge that the Yalu installations (upon which the Chinese in Manchuria depend for light and power) will be safeguarded. It is also too mild; the time has arrived to confront the aggressors and their cannon-fodder with an equally solemn threat of atomic action in the event of organized intervention. An impressive coupling of these two steps—one after the other—may yet save the Far East from going up in an explosion which would put all the world in eclipse.

All through the action in Korea the task of diplomacy should have been to keep our purposes crystal clear. It is necessary to din into Asian ears the absence of a spirit of conquest in this country's war aims. In this respect our diplomacy has been remiss, for the Chinese still regard our moves with suspicion. In the circumstances, perhaps this is understandable. It derives from our military intervention in 1947-48 on the side of the Chinese Nationalists, and has been kept alive by support for Chiang Kai-shek in Formosa. On June 27 we decided to neutralize Formosa while the United Nations was meeting the challenge in Korea—a step avowedly to keep the action in Korea from spreading—but this didn't assuage Chinese misgivings. Nor did General MacArthur help matters, but, on the contrary, made them worse, when he went to Formosa and then prepared his VFW statement virtually Americanizing Formosa.

Thus the action in Korea and particularly in North Korea assumed an extraordinary delicacy. In other words, the war was as much a political as a military operation. Clemenceau says that war is too important to leave to the generals, and North Korea is a supreme example in point. Every step of the way in North Korea should have been accompanied by political activity intended to bring home to Peking that the Yalu installations were safe. Such an assurance has never been delivered. Of course, contact with Peking is difficult; but not insuperable. Many factors, including our internal politics, have prevented the recognition of the de facto regime in China, so that any relations are indirect. We have hitherto depended upon representation through the Indian Ambassador in Peking to eke out the occasional clarifications of the peaceful bent of our policy which have come from the President. Now, according to rumor, Ambassador Panikkar is unreliable; he is said to have furthered rather than allayed Chinese suspicions. True or not, it is incompetent (to use no harsher word) to tolerate a diplomatic hiatus during the conduct of war operations in an area where a third party and neighbor has a vital stake.

China's intervention so far is said to be irregular and unofficial. Nevertheless the Peking government has never disguised its concern about the scope of operations in North Korea. It first declared there would be a "violent reaction" to any crossing of the 38th parallel. General MacArthur waited there, not because of the Chinese warning, but in order to give the North Koreans a chance to surrender. Since this didn't come, he pushed north, having in the meantime received U. N. authorization. As soon as U. N. troops started to approach the Yalu installations, "volunteer" action by incoming Chinese came swiftly. And now the call is issuing out of the Peking radio for more "volunteers" to join the "peace preservation corps." The U. N., from which General MacArthur virtually asks for authorization to move outside the Korean border so as to stop and crush the reinforcements, cannot let this menace of large-scale entries pass unnoticed.

Action is needed if the United Nations is to retain any standing in the world, and the member nations must back it up much more vigorously then hitherto. Even more necessary is that the informal ban on atomic action be lifted so as to put General MacArthur on less uneven terms if the Chinese do come in in number. One reason for the existing ban is that atomic weapons would demonstrate the over-use of power. That time may soon be over. We may soon be coming into the stage of a struggle for survival—of our young manhood as well as the United Nations. No means can be neglected, therefore, if China has decided to commit her massive manpower, for China is Korea 20 times over. Wars start on miscalculations, and there must be none left in the Chinese mind in this business.

Education Lag

Rarely has there been so much interest in the schools in the Washington area, particularly in suburban communities, as prevailed just prior to the election. This popular concern, and the close relation of school affairs to other issues of local government, were an appropriate augury for American Education Week, observance of which began Monday. Numerous talks and open houses are scheduled by P-TAs and other cooperating organizations to emphasize the importance of the school as the cradle of the democratic way of life.

The urgency of the times, however, requires more than mere appreciation for what has been done. For the sad fact is that the schools are still falling behind the demands placed upon them. Enrollments are increasing at a rate of a million a year; by 1956-57 it is estimated that there will be eight million more children in elementary schools and two million more in high schools than in 1946-47. These children are coming on at a time when schools already are desperately overcrowded; to provide even minimum facilities for the influx, new construction aggregating 12 billion dollars is adjudged necessary over the next 10 years. Meanwhile teachers' salaries, though improved, have fallen behind salaries generally in the rate of increase, and the effect is being felt in the qualifications of teaching personnel.

Not all these conditions apply in the Washington area, which is relatively well off and is able to do more to improve its schools than can poorer districts. The tragedy is that most poorer areas are falling further and further behind needs. The only school aid bills passed by Congress during the last session affect only a limited number of school districts where there are large numbers of Government employes; the much more important construction aid measures are still languishing in the House. Education Week ought to be a time to turn the heat on for passage of school legislation which approaches the problem on the basis of need and self-help. Schools have not yet recovered from the effects of World War II. In the present limited emergency school aid is not a mere welfare measure, but a highly necessary step to prevent standards from declining further.

That T-H Law

In his Saturday night campaign speech the President accused "that no good Republican Eightieth Congress" of trying to destroy labor unions through the "infamous" Taft-Hartley law. The Republicans, he declared, "were on the way back to the conditions the special interests like—low wages, unemployment, weak unions." Fortunately the people discovered what they were up to and elected a Democratic Congress that in some mysterious fashion foiled the dastardly plot. How the Eighty-first Congress performed this miracle is by no means clear, since the law is still on the statute books and is being enforced. Indeed the President has made good use of it on several occasions to enjoin strikes threatening national health and safety. Moreover, the law has not "busted" labor unions, and if that was its purpose, as Mr. Truman charged, it is a dismal failure. For by banning unfair practices that arouse public resentment against labor unions the law removes an obstacle to organizational growth.

The chief defect of the Taft-Hartley Act is the weakness of the provisions for dealing with disputes that create national emergencies. The President himself is chiefly responsible for the failure of Congress to strengthen the law in that respect. Even its sponsors concede that other revisions are needed, but they, too, have been blocked by the President's stubborn insistence on outright repeal of the act.

Not only is the Taft-Hartley law intact, but by Mr. Truman's own admission laboring men and women are prospering. Employment has achieved record heights, and labor unions have been demanding and receiving round after round of wage increases. It would, of course, be absurd to attribute these gains to the Taft-Hartley law. But it is equally absurd, in face of the evidence, to pretend that the effect of the law is to lower wages and create unemployment. Even in a political address it is unpardonable for the Chief Executive to distort facts and base conclusions on untenable premises.

Our Invisible Trade

The sharp decline in the merchandise export surplus of the United States and the appearance for the first time in many years of a merchandise import surplus for the month of August has attracted a great deal of attention. Our trade with other countries is not confined, however, to purchases and sales of goods. Numerous so-called invisible items such as travel, shipping, interest payments and insurance, are included in international accounts that require us to pay dollars to other countries or receive dollars in payment. Consequently, the over-all balance of payments may show a different trend from that of the merchandising balance. As it happens, such is not the case. For Secretary of Commerce Sawyer said last week that the service part of our trading account shows the same shift as the merchandise account. Department of Commerce officials estimate that the total over-all surplus which was running at an annual rate of 2.9 billion dollars during the first six months of the year virtually disappeared during the three following months. These are startling changes reflecting an improvement of the trade balances and exchange resources of countries that have long suffered from the unbalanced condition of their international payments account.

We can no longer be criticized for allegedly creating dollar scarcities by refusing to buy as much as we sell. Through our foreign-aid program we have, in fact, made it possible for aided countries to sell us more goods and services as well as to buy more of our goods. This aid has not only been a powerful factor in sustaining the postwar export trade of the United States, but it has also, as Mr. Sawyer indicated, built up a vigorous competition with domestic producers. We planned it that way, and have no ground for complaint, since we have helped to lay the foundation for a sounder system of world trade that enables other countries to pay for the goods they buy from us with their own goods and services instead of relying on gifts of United States dollars to meet payments.

"Balanced Budget"

You are to be complimented on your editorial of October 28 which demonstrates so clearly the importance of substantially increasing Federal tax revenue at this time. You state correctly that Federal expenditures can be expected to accelerate much faster than Federal revenues, under existing tax rates and that our balanced budget of today will soon develop into a deficit budget with further inflation resulting.

There is one thought expressed in your editorial, however, which seems to require additional comment. The statement "when cash inflow and outflow are in balance, Government spending is neither inflationary nor deflationary," implies that the Government fiscal program today is neither inflationary nor deflationary, since the cash budget is balanced.

While it is true that the dollar outlays for defense purposes will be much higher next year, there is a substantial portion of the defense budget which is even now being contracted for. Although they will not receive payment until deliveries are made, businessmen are already on the basis of these contracts, borrowing funds, expanding plant, hiring personnel and placing orders with their suppliers. The result may well have an inflationary impact today which exceeds substantially the neutralizing effect of current tax collections.

We are in the situation where a balanced cash budget is actually inflationary because of the nature of the Government's expansionary program. It is practically impossible to generalize with respect to the inflationary or deflationary effects of the Federal budget. While it is true that a deficit typically is inflationary and a surplus is deflationary, it is possible for a balanced budget to be either inflationary or deflationary, or neutral because of the character of the individual expenditure programs on the one hand, and the nature of the revenue structure on the other.

So we should add a second compelling reason for increasing taxes at this time to the one set forth in your editorial, namely, that today we should be running a substantial cash surplus in order for the Federal Government's program to be more nearly neutral and in order to stem the current inflationary tide.

Communism In Cuba

Several United States publications have referred lately to the National Federation of Airline Employes in Cuba as being under the tight control of the Communist Party. Thus the impression was created that the Communists are particularly strong among the ground personnel of the Rancho Boyeros airport in Havana, where the union has its strongest local.

Recently I was visited by Manuel Lopez and Calixto Sanchez, two leaders of the National Federation of Airline Employes of Cuba, who stated that this description of their union is entirely wrong and asked my support in making the truth known.

I am in a position to assert, as a result of long standing acquaintance with the labor movement in Cuba, that Communist influence in the National Federation of Airline Employes of Cuba, particularly at the Rancho Boyeros airport, was stamped out long ago. This union constitutes one of the anti-Communist strongholds in Cuba and was among those that demanded the suppression of the Communist daily, Hoy, because of its violent anti-democratic and anti-United States propaganda.

Montgomery Charter

I wish to correct an inference that might be drawn from an item in your issue of November 3 concerning a group of seven Democrats who deplored the attacks being made by other Democrats and charterites on Democratic candidates for the county council in Montgomery County. One of these Democrats, Mrs. Pearl Hertz, is identified as a member of the League of Women Voters. Since the league is a nonpartisan organization and does not back or oppose candidates or political parties, we wish to emphasize that Mrs. Hertz in no way speaks for the League of Women Voters. She presents only her own point of view.

The league does back issues, after careful study. The home-rule council-manager government was an issue in 1948 and has the full support of the League of Women Voters of Montgomery County, which is committed to work for good government.

Korean Executions

With reference to the Associated Press story carried November 4, describing the execution of Reds in Korea by South Korean soldiers, there has been much comment because the article, while factual, no doubt, lacked background facts. What were the circumstances that led up to the executions? What had the Communists done? Did they have a trial? Was their execution approved by President Rhee's government, or by General MacArthur?

Just to take out of prison 17 offenders, who were accused of being traitors to their country, including a young Kiisang (Geisha) girl who had been a mistress of a Communist police chief in Seoul, and shoot them wantonly as dramatized in Mr. Charles Grutzner's story—surely is not the policy of the present government of the Republic of Korea as those who have followed intimately Dr. Rhee's constructive and patriotic design for his nation, are able to understand.

In Korea all mothers nurse their babies until the child is able to eat solid food. No milk is available for children. If there is any milk the mother drinks it to help sustain life with which to feed her infant. This is the usual custom. In Korea all mothers carry their young strapped on their backs, and if a mother has to go to prison for any reason, if she carries a baby the latter must go with the mother in order to be fed. Otherwise the child would starve. This is the custom, and accounts for the fact the young Kiisang girl had her child with her in confinement in prison. CHARLES MAINES.

Threat In The Ober Law

At a meeting on Saturday morning the faculty of St. John's College read and discussed the controversial Subversive Activities Act of 1949, which is being presented by referendum to the citizens of Maryland today. It was the unanimous vote of the members that they should place on record their opposition to this measure as being inconsistent with the fundamental principles which undergird this republic and which have accounted for the resiliency and vigor of its national life.

The most relevant of these principles is the paramount force of informed public opinion. This is impossible without freedom of discussion, and the latter depends upon freedom of opinion and freedom of association among all citizens. The breadth of the definitions of subversive persons and organizations in the law strikes at these freedoms.

What freedom of association will be left when one must guard against finding oneself unwittingly in an "organization" labeled subversive? And in the words of the law, 'organization" includes even "any group of persons, whether or not incorporated, permanently or temporarily associated together for joint action or advancement of views on any subject or subjects."

These are admittedly not cases contemplated by the framers of the act, but the law is what is written, not what its framers intended. The law as written makes possible not only the harassment of thousands for the sake of discovering a few possible subverters, but can in many cases be interpreted to apply the subversive label to men and women who are innocent. The law is, therefore, likely to be ineffective in its professed aim.

Furthermore, it shows a lack of confidence in the ability of the American principles of free discussion to subdue even the most dangerous intentions. Intentions imply ideas. You cannot suppress ideas, but you can refute them, if they are falsely grounded. The harassments and vagueness of the law will work to prevent our public servants and our teachers from helping to refute the fallacies that lead to subversion.

The objection to the act is not that it seeks to prevent the overthrow or alteration of the Government by force or violence, or that it seeks to prosecute those who are guilty of acts that are directed to this end. It is rather that it makes possible the prosecution of individuals for connection with any activity which might be interpreted as having behind it the intention of changing the government by violent means.

The question is: Who is to determine when such intention exists? Or, to phrase the question in another way: Who is to determine when, within the terms of the act, an organization is subversive? There is no list of subversive organizations determined by the courts. In the absence of such determination, the role of the Special Assistant to the Attorney General in gathering information and evidence to present to the grand jury becomes of particular importance. Moreover, it would appear that the act tends definitely to put the burden of proof upon the citizen to prove his innocence rather than upon the State to prove his guilt.

We would register no dissent from the ultimate aims which the General Assembly had in view in passing this legislation. We hold no brief for any form of totalitarianism, abnegating as it does the rights of the individual. For a Communist teacher there can be no objectivity, no teaching except in accordance with the party line. We recognize the insidious infiltration of movements hostile to democracy into various facets of our national existence, and we would deny to such men public office, as well as teaching responsibilities. This legislation, however, we believe will fail in its purpose. It will hardly ensnare the truly dangerous agent of subversion. At the same time it constitutes an ominous first step toward regimentation and the abrogation of just those basic rights and freedoms which it was designed to protect.

East And West Understanding

By Marquis Childs

Two-Way Street

DURING most of the election campaign now ended I have been 10,000 miles away. But one thing I could feel certain of, and that was that the Republicans were repeating their old charge that the Truman Administration had "lost" China to the Communists.

To talk as though "losing" China were the fault of a few individuals is a childish oversimplification of the vast historical forces at work in the world. The flames of nationalism are burning fiercely throughout Asia. And for that matter on our very doorstep, in Puerto Rico, this same consuming fire has produced an abortive revolt and the attempt on President Truman's life.

This nationalism is fed by deep-rooted memories of colonial oppression and by real and fancied injustices during the years when colonial masters from the West held native peoples in subjection. Whether any true cooperation between East and West is possible in the light of this aroused nationalism is open to serious doubt.

India is a fascinating example of both the constructive and the destructive forces inherent in nationalism. The leaders of a people newly independent are striving to fashion a nation that will combine the best of the new and the old. They are working with zeal and energy against obstacles that must at times seem almost overwhelming.

ON THE destructive side is the fierce, seemingly irreconcilable quarrel with Pakistan over which country shall get the Province of Kashmir or, in the last resort, how Kashmir is to be divided between them.

In some sections of the press the British are openly blamed for partition. They are accused of setting the two religious communities against each other on the ancient principle of divide and rule which so long enabled a handful of Britishers to rule the Indian subcontinent.

This is a part of the rancorous past that constantly produces suspicion and antagonism. The heritage from the past works against achievement of the kind of cooperative relationship that both the British and the American governments earnestly want.

One source of suspicion is the deep inferiority complex in the face of American power. This helps to explain the bitter attacks on the United States, parroting the Communist line, which appear in many newspapers and magazines in India. America's use of her great new resources of power often show immaturity and impatience which are probably our two greatest faults in our approach to Asia.

When impatience and immaturity meet hypersensitivity and pride, overlaying a deep inferiority complex, the result can be most unhappy. A background of good will for America was laid in India during the war years by two of America's able career diplomats, William Phillips and George R. Merrell. At the present moment that good will seems to be vanishing rapidly.

ONE THING is certain, and that is that from both sides a greater effort at understanding is essential. Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru has often complained of the failure of the West to try to understand the East.

But this same accusation can be brought against India's leaders. They have shown far too little understanding of what the American effort to put down Communist aggression in Korea has actually meant in terms of sacrifice of life and treasure. Some sections of the Indian press have made it sound as though the United States were to blame for the bloodshed.

The misunderstandings of the past can never justify failure to continue to work for at least a limited partnership with both India and Pakistan. Perhaps Nehru will have more understanding for the position of the West now that Communist China has bluntly rejected Nehru's appeal for negotiation on Tibet and has started a campaign to subjugate that remote mountain fastness.

At the same time, those in this country who now glibly sneer at Nehru for his repeated warning on possible Communist Chinese action in North Korea may have sneered a little too early. What is happening in Korea gives point to the warnings that India's Prime Minister has sent to London and Washington.

The greatest patience, effort, good will and understanding are essential. If anything like a working relationship is to be built between East and West. It will take far more unity inside America than we have shown thus far. If we pursue a family quarrel over who has "lost" China or Indo-China or India, then surely all of Asia will be foreclosed.

Civil Defense Director

In these days when persons in public life are so apt to be maligned, it is only fair that attention be called to a public servant acquitting himself with more than usual credit.

This past week, for midweek assembly at Gallaudet College, we had as guest speaker Inspector John E. Fondahl, acting director of civil defense for the District of Columbia. He came to tell of plans under way to meet the emergencies of catastrophe, particularly of atomic attack. His sincerity, his earnest concern on the problem, his desire to arouse people to action are contagiously impressive. He struck us as a man with a message, going all out in fulfilling an important charge, very much in the interest of all of us. IRVING S. FUSFELD,

A Communication

Credit Curbs' Effect On Home Building

By B. T. Fitzpatrick

Acting Administrator, Housing and Home Finance Agency

I have noted in your issue of October 17 a letter from James W. Pearson, executive director of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, discussing the effect of the housing credit regulations, and would like to straighten out two or three points which seem to be based on a lack of understanding of the regulations.

First of all, Mr. Pearson used as an example an $11,000 house under the new nonveteran terms to illustrate what he felt to be an unnecessarily burdensome down payment. He calculated this down payment to be $2700, the minimum required under the new regulations, plus an additional $300 in closing costs, or a total of $3000. Mr. Pearson apparently had not read the regulations, however, since they define transaction price as including most of such costs. The minimum down payment is based on the total purchase price, which includes closing costs, and therefore the $300 which he added is in excess of the regulation's requirements. All costs of acquisition, except prepaid items such as taxes and insurance, are part of the purchase price, and the down payment is calculated on that basis.

FURTHERMORE, the new regulations base the minimum down payments on transaction price, as stated above, whereas previous FHA requirements were based on value, limited under the July curbs to costs no higher than those on July 1. The same cost freeze date applied to VA cases. As is well known, housing costs and prices, which were already moving upward before Korea, have risen even more sharply in the past two or three months.

These latter increases automatically had to be added to the down payment required of the purchaser, if reflected in price. The down payment thus required on the current market was therefore considerably more than 19.1 percent required previously by FHA on an $11,000 house on the basis of value, and in a good many cases was probably as large as the new regulations would require.

In short, those unable to meet larger down payments were already being eliminated from the housing market by inflated prices. Inflation, in fact, was imposing a double penalty on the home buyer—not only did he have to meet a larger down payment, but he also had to pay an inflated price for the house he bought. This was as true in Washington as anywhere in America.

Credit restrictions, while unavoidably designed to reduce the number of home buyers next year, are expected to stop and possibly reverse inflationary price trends and thereby preserve stable values in housing. The choice seems to be between paying a higher down payment for an $11,000 house that, because of inflated price, is worth much less, and paying a higher down payment for a house that is more nearly related to necessary cost and future value.

MR. PEARSON also said that the new restrictions were issued after Government housing leaders told the home building industry that "no additional curbs would be imposed over home sales until effects of the curbs imposed July 19 were fully appraised." This is not correct. The President in his letter of July 18 to the administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency specifically called on him to "take such further actions as in your judgment are or may become necessary and appropriate." That letter was published widely.

Legislation was promptly introduced with the support of this agency to obtain additional authority for the President in further controlling real estate credit. While we carefully watched the effect of the July curbs, which were admittedly partial and temporary, and made use of those findings in determining the further steps to be taken, we consistently indicated that when the legislation was passed we expected to take whatever further steps we felt to be necessary.

I should like to comment on two other statements in Mr. Pearson's letter. One is that the one million mark in housing starts represents what he calls an anti-inflationary level. We had a million-unit year in 1949 without undue strain at that time, and we unquestionably could have increased that level on a progressive basis under normal conditions.

However, even before Korea, the expansion of home construction, spurred in large part by liberal credit, was so rapid that it was tending to outrun its supply lines, and inflation and rising prices were already serious. When we add the impact of the Korean crisis and the impending defense program to this existing situation, which by now has sent inflationary forces in housing to a critical level, it would seem apparent that we need to do more than return to the level achieved before pre-Korean shortages set in. If this judgment should prove conservative, it can be readily liberalized should future conditions warrant, but it would be virtually impossible to stem the flow of housing next year once it had entered the main stream of credit commitments and construction.

SECONDLY, I should like to comment on Mr. Pearson's reference to the effect of the new credit restrictions on housing for veterans, which he thinks will be particularly serious. He gives, however, only the requirements for nonveterans on an $11,000 house, which, as corrected, would call for a down payment of $2700 based on purchase price or slightly more if the closing costs bring the transaction price above $11,000. I think it would be helpful to note at the same time that, in the case of a GI loan, the down payment requirement at the same price under the new regulations is $1600.

By Mr. Pearson's own reasoning, this $1100 differential in the down payment represents a very substantial difference in the ability of people to buy such housing, and I am quite sure that the builders in his organization will be looking to this lower down-payment veteran market as a major outlet for their lower cost home production in 1951.

Certainly, many veterans and nonveterans alike will be unable to buy homes next year, simply because we cannot meet our full housing demand and at the same time carry on the measures now planned for our national defense. However, within the Nation's ability to serve our housing requirements, the regulations provide a significant preference for veteran purchasers which I am confident will make them an effective preferred market for the housing that we are unable to produce.

Unless Mr. Pearson believes that it is not necessary to restrict civilian production in order to meet the prior needs of defense or feels that inflation is a better way to limit consumption and demand than restrictions on the volume of credit, I think that the conclusion to be reached is that the new housing credit regulations will protect the interests of both the housing industry and the home buyer, veteran and nonveteran, under the circumstances that we face. In issuing them we have been concerned not simply with the effect of inflation on the economy generally, but, as the housing agency, even more with the disastrous effect that such inflation, already present in disturbing degree, could have on housing itself, including both the producer and the consumer.

restore peace and order to Korea, and that it needs help rather than hindrance in this task.

The diplomatic effort, in other words, will be to try to localize the Korean fighting, if possible, and to dissuade the Chinese Communists from setting Asia and perhaps the world on fire.

As for American diplomacy, it will be doubly careful from now on to march in step with other U. N. members, and to take no action on its own. The intention is that if China does start serious trouble it will embroil itself not only with the United States but with all the 53 nations that supported the original U. N. action in Korea.

China Given Reassurance

At various times since the beginning of the Korean war the United States has sought to reassure Communist China about its intentions. Sometimes these messages have been relayed by the Indian Ambassador at Peiping, K. M. Panikkar, since the United States has no representation of its own at the Communist capital.

Sometimes the reassurances have been broadcast to China in statements by President Truman. One example was a passage in the President's message of July 19, insisting that the United States had no designs on Formosa; another, a more recent broadcast, said the United States wanted no military bases in Korea.

About 10 days ago, when U. N. forces were moving toward the great hydroelectric installations on the Yalu River, the State Department suggested to General MacArthur that it might be a good idea to give the Chinese Communists another reassurance.

MacArthur Did Not Act

This would have told them that they could continue to share the electric power from the great Suiho Dam, which supplies half of Manchuria, on condition that they gave no further help to the North Korean forces.

For some reason not explained or reported to Washington, MacArthur did not act on this suggestion. He may have felt he had no way of reaching the responsible Chinese Communist authorities, or he may have concluded that further reassurances were useless.

In any event, officials said yesterday, the United States intends to send no more indirect messages to Peiping, either through the Indian Ambassador or any other intermediary. From now on, any messages of assurance or warning, or both, will come from the United Nations.

An opportunity for direct talk with the Chinese will come about November 15, when a Chinese Communist delegation is expected at Lake Success for the Security Council's discussion of alleged American aggression in Formosa.

But this presupposes that the Chinese Communists will not intervene more openly in the Korean war between now and then. What they will do is anybody's guess and the best-informed officials here found their crystal ball murky as they tried to foretell the immediate future in Asia.

Truman Warns Aggressors

there—the first time in my life, a long, long time ago.

"And in that Sunday school I met a little blue-eyed golden-haired girl, my first sweetheart.

"Her eyes are still blue, but her hair is no longer golden; it's silver, like mine. And she is still my sweetheart."

Motto of His High School

Mr. Truman, a little later, reminded the youngsters in the crowd that he went to a high school that stood on the site of the Memorial Building.

"The motto of that high school was 'Youth, the hope of the world,'" he said. "You are still the hope of the world, and will always be."

Although he was back home among his friends and neighbors, the Chief Executive was under a heavy guard today. The attempt on his life at Blair House last week had changed things a lot.

In the past, he would walk around the town in carefree fashion, dropping into stores and stopping to chat with boyhood companions on the street.

There was none of that today. He moved in a closed car, with six Secret Service men running alongside, their hands close to their revolvers. Uniformed policemen, one of them with field glasses, were stationed on a nearby roof when he delivered his speech.

In a brief talk at luncheon, Mr. Truman referred with deep feeling to the death of White House policeman Leslie Coffelt, who was shot down in the Blair House melee.

He said:

"You can't understand just how a man feels when somebody else dies for him. I have got the greatest bunch of people in that line that anybody ever had. They do their duty—and that was amply demonstrated."

Foundation Is Created

John A. Abel, grand secretary of the Order of Eagles, had just presented Mr. Truman with a check for one thousand dollars. He explained that the Eagles were giving it to establish a trust fund, the Harry S. Truman Foundation, "for the health and educational welfare of the children of those men who die while serving so faithfully in protecting the life of our President."

Mr. Truman thanked the Eagles and said:

"It is a wonderful thing, and I will see if I can't get the arrangements made so that it will do the most good."

[Coffelt and his wife, Mrs. Cressie Coffelt, had no children. Mrs. Coffelt, however, has a daughter by a previous marriage, Cora Jane Wilson, 19, who lived with the Coffelts at 1915 N. Wayne st., Arlington.—Editor's Note.]

The luncheon was held in the Laurel Club's dining room in Independence. Georges Volland, mayor of Annecy, made a little speech in French, and would up with "Vive, le President."

A "frontier band," its members wearing cowboy shirts, played "Pony Boy," "Mona Lisa," "It Had to Be You," and other favorites.

Says He Could Win Votes

Mr. Truman made a joshing reference to politics in his luncheon talk.

"I see Democrats and Republicans and what-nots here," he said, amidst laughter. "I wish I could just talk with you about 15 minutes. I think I would get you all to vote the Democratic ticket."

He reminded the audience that both he and Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder were to make prepared speeches at the dedication of the Liberty Bell sent over from Annecy.

Grinning at his close friend, Snyder, he went on to say: "I hope you won't be too entirely bored by what the Secretary of the Treasury has to say, but I am going to make you a good speech."

The ceremony at the Memorial building, where the Liberty Bell was dedicated, started too early, and the sponsors had a problem. It was to find ways of killing time before the program went on the air.

White House Press Secertary Charles G. Ross, a native of Independence, was one of many called upon to speak. Ross recalled that he was born just around the corner, and continued:

"I was almost born in jail. My father ran the jail. Some of my sisters were born there, and we used to call them jail birds."

Inspects Truman Mementoes

Just before leaving Independence this afternoon, to return to his hotel suite in Kansas City, Mr. Truman visited the Independence library.

The townspeople have been collecting Truman mementoes and he wanted to see thm.

He viewed an oil painting of his mother, the late Martha Ellen Truman, the work of Mrs. Ruth Koppang of Kansas City. It is based on a famous news picture made in 1945 when the elder Mrs. Truman told her son to "Be good and be game."

The Chief Executive also viewed a copy of the Gutenberg Bible. He held his hand on this when he took the oath as President on January 20, 1949. He had written in the margin that he held his hand on the twentieth chapter of Exodus.

"I bet not many people know what's in the twentieth chapter of Exodus," he mused today, as he was looking at the Bible.

"I bet you don't know," he said suddenly, looking at Maurice Johnson, a cameraman.

Johnson confessed that he didn't know.

"The Ten Commandments," Mr. Truman said, chuckling.

He is going to vote "the straight Democratic ticket" here Tuesday and then fly back to Washington.

Austrian Treaty First Topic in Any Meeting of 'Big 4'

A State Department spokesman said yesterday an Austrian treaty "presumably" would be the first matter to be taken up if there is a new "Big Four" meeting on Germany as proposed by Moscow.

Reporters were reminded by Press Officer Michael J. McDermott an Austrian settlement was left as unfinished business at the last meeting of the Foreign Ministers of Russia, Britain, France and the United States. This meeting was held in Paris last year.

The proposal for another meeting was advanced Friday night by Russia, in separate notes at Moscow to Ambassadors of the three Western powers.

They are preparing an early reply and informed American officials indicated that while the proposal is viewed as a propaganda maneuver, the reply may not be a flat turndown.

OF BOOKS AND BRENTANO'S

This city of ours, this Washington, is in many very real ways the nerve center of the world. Decisions made here, whims indulged, orders passed on, create an immediate backwash in all the distant byways of the world. This fact is dramatized by four new books, all evolving from Washington, all with connotations which concern the world . . .

THE MAN OF INDEPENDENCE ($3.75) is a biography of Harry S. Truman, and of the America in which he matured, by Jonathan Daniels, son of Josephus Daniels. Truman is, like all of us, directly the product of his specific environment. His speech, his thought patterns, his entire being, reflect the color and flavor of the land from which he came. Inevitably, too, the book portrays the growth of the American system which moulded Harry Truman, the system which today stands as the only answer to totalitarianism . . .

The most celebrated legal case of our generation is studied in Alistair Cooke's fine dispassionate book, A GENERATION ON TRIAL: U.S.A. v. ALGER HISS ($3.50). Beyond its considerable political significance, L'affaire Hiss contains most of the ingredients of a finely spun mystery story. The drama, the evidence, and the intricate emotional conflicts of the trial come to life in this fascinating courtroom treatment . . .

George E. Allen is portly, jovial and uninhibited. As Court Jester to Roosevelt and Truman, he has provided official Washington with an unofficial sense of humor. In PRESIDENTS WHO HAVE KNOWN ME ($3.00), he displays the collection of inside stories, anecdotes, and shrewd political analysis which explain why he has been an important Washington figure for lo these many years . . .

OF MEN AND MOUNTAINS ($4.00) is a book of personal adventure and discovery, in the mountains of the Pacific Northwest, by a man who found there his health, philosophy and way of life, Justice William O. Douglas.

One On the Aisle

You Will Do Well To 'Lend an Ear'

By Richard L. Coe

"LEND AN EAR" is the revue which three seasons ago started a still-at-it stream of such entertainments. After traipsing about the country it's finally arrived at our Gayety and you'll be glad to hear its sketches are still immensely funny.

Unless Beatrice Lillie is on hand to be in them, revue sketches have a habit of being pretty terrible, but such is not the case with the ones Charles Gaynor, the Vermont Noel Coward, took his time piecing together for the Gayety's tenant. While most of the original cast has now gone on to bigger if not better things—Carol Channing and Yvonne Adair to "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," William Eythe to the new Philadelphia sensation, "Out of This World" and Gene Nelson to Hollywood stardom, to name a few of the missing—the current company comes through okay if not sensationally.

A sketch no detester of the Messrs. Shubert revivals should miss closes the first act "The Missing Road Company," wherein, before absolutely gruesome settings by Raoul Pene DuBois, is enacted that imaginary delight of 1925, "The Gladiola Girl" This is the one with "The Old Yahoo Step" and if it doesn't make up to you for the tattered "Rose Maries" and "Fireflies," nothing ever will Then there's the trip to Santo Domingo, a tourist's delight where natives either knit or wind up dead. There's the pointed little song about "Three Little Queens of the Silver Screen" and a nice comment on what happens to people who go to foreign movies.

And finally there's an observation about operatic words in which, for once, you learn just what nonsense all those odd looking people are singing.

Thanks to Gower Champion, who figured them out, and the young dancers who do them, the dancing turns are neat, uncluttered. Peter Conlow does a fine job in both "Friday Dancing Class" and "Yahoo" and William Skipper takes over Gene Nelson's imaginative cigarette dance. Antoinette Guhlke is another especially able dancer. No doubt about it, our young American dancers' years of study show off well.

Max Showalter, who's been around a deal in the revue and TV worlds, is nicely at home in the sketches, which in themselves require the especial brand of playing he gives them. From the original cast you'll especially enjoy Al Checco (note his ancient chorus boy in "Gladiola") Gloria Hamilton ("Gladiola") and Jenny Lou Law, who works a bit hard for her awful "Ballade," but does nicely in the sketches.

While there are occasionally some bleak spots in which the more crisp original didn't shine either, the sketches and humor will tide you through easily and the DuBois settings, costumes and lighting are still models of smart simplicity.

All told, if it's laughs you're after, you'll find them in this bouyant, witty and tuneful little show.

"LEND AN EAR." William Eythe, William Katzell and Franklin Warner present a musical revue in two acts with sketches, lyrics and music by Charles Gaynor. Choreography by Gower Champion. Staged by Hal Gerson. Additional sketches by Joseph Stein and Will Glickman. Costumes, settings and lighting by Raoul Pene DuBois. The cast includes Max Showalter, Jenny Lou Law, William Skipper, Peter Conlow, Al Checco, Gloria Hamilton, Gloria Evans, Robert Dizon, Antoinette Guhlke, Margaret Jeanne, Sid Lawson, Florence Lord, Calvin Lowell, Rica Owen, and Jeannie Bledsoe. At the Gayety, matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

THE VARIETY CLUB yesterday elected the following officers to serve in 1951: Chief Barker, Morton Gerber; 1st Assistant Chief Barker, Jerry Adams; 2d Assistant Chief Barker, Sam Roth; Property Master, Victor Orsinger; Treasurer, Sam Galanty . . . Others elected to the board of governors for the coming year are Alvin Q. Ehrlich, Carter T. Barron, George Crouch, Fred Kogod, Jack Fruchtman and Leon Makover . . . Nathan D. Golden and Jake Flax will be delegates to the '51 convention, with Glenn Norris and Jerry Adams as alternates . . . Automatically Wade Pearson, this year's Chief Barker, becomes Canvasman for '51, with Gerber as his alternate.

SUZANNE DALBERT arrives today for the Washington treatment, with interviews, sightseeing and a stage appearance at 9 tonight on the Warner stage . . . France's Suzanne made good with Louis Jouvet on his South American tour, started off playing bits, wound up in leads three years later . . . Her first American jobs were for the Voice of America and after a role in "The Accused" landed the only feminine lead in "Breakthrough," which is the Warner Brothers' version of how our men slogged from the Normandie beaches to St. Lo.

JAN STRUTHER, who has not even been asked to see "The Miniver Story" wherein her great character dies, proves a surprisingly lively, if immensely literate lady . . . Visiting the Jack Pattersons after showing her son Jack the cattle lands of our West (back in Scotland he's a cattle man), she turned up with a song I won't be satisfied about till Beatrice Lillie sings it in a revue . . . I can't tell you much about it except that it's naughty, has to do with television and Jan sings it to her own guitar, hillbilly accompaniment . . . Hearing it in Mrs Anne Archbold's immense living room was as bizarre an experience as you can imagine.

GLOOMIEST MAN IN TOWN: Scott Kirkpatrick, the Gayety's publicity man who seems to have made bets with everybody about how New York would go crazy about "The Barrier." . . . It closed there Saturday night after four performances.

"THE INFORMER" is coming back to the Little Friday, where it's already had some 14 or 15 engagements . . . The Victor McLaglen picture it was which started Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller into the career which for so many years made the Little the town's only "art" house, forerunner of six . . . "The Informer" had been playing Keith's to small houses for a week and Mrs. Miller was changing programs at the Little every two days; someone told her "The Informer" would probably cop all the Oscars that year. . . She took it on for a run that lasted 14 weeks . . . This will be the first time the picture has been shown since the Little passed from Mrs. M's control.

You'll get an unparalleled portrait of F. D. R. and the era in which he was making American policy by reading "F. D. R. His Personal Letters," starting Sunday in The Washington Post.

Hoffman Elected Head of Ford Foundation

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Paul G. Hoffman, former head of the Economic Cooperation Administration, was elected president of the 238-million-dollar Ford Foundation today at a salary of $75,000 a year.

Henry Ford, 2d, chairman of the board of trustees, introduced Hoffman at a press conference, saying the foundation "couldn't have secured a better person in the world for the job."

Hoffman, who will assume his duties January 1 after a California vacation, said the foundation's first task will be selection of a staff to identify the major problems in keeping the world free.

Hoffman said the foundation definitely will not be a "banking institution" that will "sit back and wait for people to ask it for money," but will take an active part in contributing both money and manpower in executing the answers to problems of freedom.

The former $96,000-a-year president of Studebaker Corp. predicted that some of the foundation's 238-million-dollar assets will be spent "to strengthen the Voice of America," not just as a radio program, but through all means of communication.

Besides the main office of the foundation in Detroit, Hoffman said he hoped to establish offices in New York and Pasadena, Calif.

Belgian Arms Sold to China, Paper Charges

BRUSSELS, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Brussels progovernment newspaper La Cite accused Belgian arms manufacturers today of selling guns and bullets to Communist China "at a moment when America is being called upon to arm us."

The newspaper said it took most of the figures to back up its story from the government's official monthly foreign trade bulletin. The bulletin shows that Belgium had exported $7,190,000 worth of automatic weapons, cartridges and rifles from 1948 through February of 1950. The newspaper added that it had "incontestable proof" that $4,700,000 worth of munitions had gone to Mao Tze-tung's Red regime from January to September this year.

A government spokesman had no other comment than to point out that Belgium's arms manufacture is privately operated. Officials of the Fabrique Nationale—chief maker of small arms in the country—refused to comment.

British 'Sure' Atomic Scientist Is in Russia

LONDON, Nov. 6 (AP).—A government spokesman today announced he has "no doubt" that British atom scientist Bruno Pontecorvo has gone to Russia.

Minister of Supply George Strauss, who supervises Britain's atomic energy research, told Parliament that, although he had no conclusive evidence of the Italian-born scientist's whereabouts, "I have no doubt that he is in Russia."

When Pontecorvo's disappearance was first reported last month in Rome, newspapers, British officials refused to acknowledge any concern and declared they had no reason to believe he would not come back to England.

The 37-year-old scientist was last seen with his wife and three children in Helsinki September 2.

Conservative John Boyd Carpenter asked Strauss if it was known at the time he was first employed at the Harwell atomic research center that Pontecorvo was related to a prominent Communist abroad. The minister said it was not known, but that it was believed he had been adequately screened for loyalty.

Pontecorvo's cousin, Italian Communist Senator Emilio Sereni, is a member of the executive committee of his party.

Strauss told Commons the physicist had worked in Canada during the war with Dr. Allan Nunn May, who later was convicted for passing atomic secrets to Russia and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Strauss said there were 13 foreign scientists who became British subjects and are now working at Harwell. Another foreign-born expert, Prof. Lajos Janassy, skipped back back to his Communist homeland in Hungary.

Strauss said "so far as is known" Pontecorvo took no documents with him.

High Court Ignores Kent Damage Suit

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to consider a damage suit brought by Otis B. Kent, retired Maryland tax attorney, against Austin F. Canfield, a Washington lawyer, and a number of others.

The suit grew out of testimony given by Canfield during a 1946 breach of promise case involving Kent.

West German Leaders Told Of Arms Need

BONN, Nov. 6 (AP).—In an atmosphere of urgency, United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy today conferred on German rearmament with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and the leader of the parliamentary opposition, Socialist Kurt Schumacher.

No official communique was released about the talks, which were held separately.

Informed sources said they were "plain talk" sessions in which McCloy gave West Germany's two most powerful leaders straight-from-the-shoulder American views about the need for using German manpower for defense of the west against any Communist aggression.

A foreign policy debate is scheduled this week in the West German Parliament on the explosive rearmament issue.

Schumacher and his Socialist Party have been campaigning against rearmament.

Adenauer has publicly gone along with American proposals to place German units into a unified European army.

STORK RACE: George A. Didden, jr., president of the National Capital Bank, last week became the father of his fifth child, a boy. Didden, who at 40 is Washington's youngest bank head, denies he's attempting to equal or best the seven-child record of W. T. Vandoren, president of the Liberty National Bank. "I am now ready," says Didden, "to recognize Mr. Vandoren as the champion father among the bank presidents, since there is little hope that at the ripe old age of 40 the remaining time and the wear and tear will allow me to equal his record."

Mencken Gets Beer, Demands Smokes

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6 (AP).—H. L. Mencken has recovered to the point where he can have an occasional drink of beer and is demanding that his doctors allow him to smoke.

The author, critic and newspaperman is still in Johns Hopkins Hospital, where he was admitted last October 12 after a severe heart attack.

Doctors called it "acute complications of a chronic vascular condition." The 70-year-old writer was not then expected to recover.

4 Subsidiaries Of U. S. Steel To Be United

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP).—United States Steel Corp. tonight announced that four wholly-owned subsidiaries would be brought together into a single operating company January 1.

The four subsidiaries are: United States Steel Corp. of Delaware, Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., H. C. Frick Coke Co. and United States Coal & Coke Co.

The newly formed operating company, which also will be a wholly-owned subsidiary of United States Steel, will be called United States Steel Co.

Irving S. Olds, United States Steel Corp. chairman, said the action is being taken to simplify the corporate structure of United States Steel.

He said headquarters of the new concern will be in an office building now being erected for United States Steel and others in Pittsburgh.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the parent company and of United States Steel Corp. of Delaware, will become president of the new company.

He will continue as president of the parent company—United States Steel Corp.

The other principal executives of the new operating company will be five executive vice presidents: Clifford F. Hood, operations; David F. Austin, commercial; Roger M. Blough, law and secretarial; Malcolm W. Reed, engineering, and George W. Rooney, accounting.

Hood is president of Carnegie-Illinois; Austin, Reed and Rooney are vice presidents of the United States Steel Corp. of Delaware, and Blough is secretary and general solicitor of United States Steel Corp. of Delaware.

U.S. Purchases Three Buildings Near Blair House for $525,000

The General Services Administration yesterday paid $525,000 for three buildings located just east of Blair House.

The buildings were bought from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace which is moving its headquarters to a 12-story International Center being constructed near the United Nations center in New York.

W. E. Reynolds, Public Buildings Service Commissioner, said Presidential security was not involved in the transaction.

He said the property had been up for sale for some time, and there were reports a prospective purchaser was planning to build an office building on it.

Reynolds said Government officials felt an office building would be "wrong" for this location, diagonally across from the White House and adjacent to the historic Blair and Blair-Lee houses.

The Government already owns about two-thirds of the property in the square, and purchase of the Carnegie Endowment buildings was authorized by Congress during its last session. GSA has no immediate plans for the buildings.

The property has frontages of about 83 feet on Jackson pl. and about 107 feet on Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Theft-Refund Racket Admitted by Woman

A 24-year-old shoplifter yesterday admitted stealing clothes from Garfinckel's department store and turning them in for refunds totaling $70.

Miss Arena Rice, who gave her address as 111 15th st. se., pleaded guilty to four counts of petty larceny and two counts of false pretenses.

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson referred her case to the probation office for a presentence investigation.

Poor Grades Of VMI 'Rats' Laid to Hazing

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Virginia Military Institute freshmen are having a hard time with their studies and Norfolk parents who have sons in that class blame hazing.

The school newspaper, the VMI Cadet, lamented in an editorial that 74 "rats," as they are called by upper classmen, failed two or more subjects for the September-October grading period.

"This represents about 30 percent of the Rat class; it means that the large majority of these Rats are well on the way to bulling out of the institute," the editorial says.

The 30 percent of the freshmen who are failing two or more subjects is the largest number in the history of the school.

Rickey Starts at Bottom Again, Takes Pirate Job

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Tuesday Morning Quarterback:

ON THE SAME DAY the Redskins were blowing their sixth straight because they couldn't hold a seven-point lead in the last two minutes at the Polo Grounds, the pro league standings were telling a revealing story. One of the Redskins' preseason victims, the Yankees, were riding on top of the league with six wins in seven games.

Povich

It takes little jogging of the memory to recall that in September, the Redskins licked the Yankees in a gay romp, 24-7. That was the month when there was no ceiling on the optimism of Redskin fans, and the front office impressarios were promoting that feeling with grandiloquent claims of "the best Redskin personnel in history."

Oh, the Redskins were hot in late August and September. They swept to five straight wins—over the Los Angeles Rams, the San Francisco Forty-Niners, the Chicago Cardinals, the Detroit Lions and the New York Yankees. And then in the season's opener they polished off the Baltimore Colts.

They haven't won a game since, unfortunately. But those preseason triumphs served a purpose. They whooped up the season-ticket sales, which had been lagging. That might have been the trouble.

EVIDENTLY, the Redskins preseason opposition didn't put so much emphasis on those exhibition games and were more interested in getting a good look at all their talent. The Cardinals, a team that took a 31-7 beating from the Redskins in August, turned around and whipped 'em 38-28 in October, when it counted.

And that Redskin personnel they talk about, obviously was over-rated. The only reason the Redskins don't have the worst record in either division is because of the forethought of George Marshall, who let the Baltimore Colts in the league for a mere token payment of $150,000 for his territorial rights. The standings now show that the Redskins are not the worst club—they're only tied with the Colts for that distinction.

Their fortunes were supposed to pick up when they signed Charley Justice three weeks ago, but Justice has been no ball of fire as yet, though he could be. If he doesn't achieve greatness as a pro, however, it will be suddenly remembered that big-shot college stars before him also failed in the pro league. The list is long.

THE REDSKINS' newest woe—that 24-21 defeat by Tim Mara's Giants who stirred up 10 points in the last 2 minutes—could be called mal de mara, I guess. In any event, the Redskins were a sick-looking crew on the touchdown pass that tied the game, and the unrehearsed lateral by Taylor and Justice that was fumbled into the hands of the Giants and set up the winning field goal.

The Redskins lacked the poise of a good football team with their inability to protect either their one-touchdown lead or the 21-21 tie that later developed. Most unforgivable was the Giants' tying touchdown. All that Harry Dowda and Chuck Drazenovich had to do was sit on Bill Swiacki after he caught that fourth-down pass on the Redskins' 12, and the Redskins would have had the ball and the ball game.

What ensued, though, was the strangest sequence of the day. With Swiacki on his back and the two Redskins' pass defenders showing no further interest in the play after dumping him, the Giants' good end simply got his feet under him again and reeled to a touchdown. The Alphonse-Gaston act of Dowda and Drazenovich, each assuming the other would take another crack at Swiacki, was an incredible piece of protocol.

AND AS IF Coach Herman Ball was not neck-deep in his woes, he finds himself under the gun from an off-the-field source in these sad times. He is being second-guessed from the radio booth where Harry Wismer is quarreling with the Redskins' choice of plays. There is no record that a game was ever won from the broadcasting booth, but with Twenty-Five Percent Stockholder Wismer carping at the coaching, Ball's task is none the lighter.

One year ago today, the Redskins unloaded a head coach, Admiral John Whelchel. His five-year contract, which lasted all of seven months, was dissolved by "mutual agreement" between Whelchel and Marshall. Ball was Marshall's choice as Whelchel's successor. If Ball isn't a good coach, then neither is Marshal a good chooser.

It's all pretty grim, as the Redskins head for the season's stretch with no guarantee that they'll win another game. In succession, they face the Eagles, the Colts, Browns, Steelers, and Browns again. I'd say their trouble isn't coaching. Their weakness is not enough good football players.

Ohio State Gets More Votes But Army No. 1

By Jack Hand

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP).—Army nosed out Ohio State in a photo finish today to recapture the No. 1 spot in the Associated Press weekly college football poll.

Southern Methodist, leader the last two weeks, tumbled to seventh place with only two firsts among 314 votes.

Ohio State's high-scoring machine actually received more first place ballots than Army, 94-88 but the Cadets rolled up enough points for second and third to eke out a win, 2451 to 2402.

Points in this nationwide poll of football writers and radio sportscasters are figured on the basis of 10 for first, 9 for second and so on down to one for 10th place.

Oklahoma was a close-up third with 48 firsts and 2389 points despite a rugged 27-18 ball game with Colorado. Kentucky charged into fourth place with 35 firsts and 1920 points on its 40-6 rout of Florida.

Texas, which knocked SMU out of the perfect record class, moved into fifth position with 11 firsts and 1911 points.

Others in the first 10 in order were California, Southern Methodist, Princeton, Miami and Illinois.

Maryland's Terps, who defeated George Washington, 23-7, Saturday, dropped two places from 16th to 18th.

Tennessee topped the second 10 with Michigan State, Clemson and Wyoming following. Then came Wisconsin, Nebraska, Washington and Maryland a three-way tie for 19th among UCLA, Kansas and Lehigh.

Cooper Upsets Rudy Pasco Before 2283

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Jimmy Cooper, District featherweight, passed an important milestone in his ring career last night, decisioning favored Rudy Pasco at Turner's Arena before 2283 patrons.

Last night was the first time this season that the fights have not been telecast. Apparently it paid off. There was not an empty seat in the house.

Until last night Pasca had lost only one fight while accumulating 38 victories, including wins over some of the country's better boxers in his weight class.

For two rounds the fight was almost even. In the third Pasco maneuvered Cooper against the ropes and belted him with rights and lefts. The local boy recovered rapidly, however, and in the fourth round got his famous two handed attack functioning.

Cooper stalked Pasco for the next six rounds, punishing him with hard lefts and winning every round. Cooper made a strong bid to knock the French-Canadian boy out in the tenth, but the ring-wise fighter hung on and lasted out the bout.

In the semifinal, former All-Army Middleweight Champion Johnny Pratt survived a terrific

ARMLESS TACKLER—Each football season the Armless Tackler, otherwise known as the Goalpost, somehow gets into the game. This time the Armless Tackler lends a little help to Sam Cathcart and Jim Powers of the San Francisco 49ers as they try to stop Paul Barry of the Los Angeles Rams from scoring a touchdown. But Barry makes the score in the Rams' 28-21 victory in a National Football League game

Ball Casts Aside Role Of 'Nice Guy'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Comes a time in every man's life when he has to get tough and 9:30 this morning will probably be the time Herman Ball elects to sound off against the Redskins at Griffith Stadium.

Burned to a crisp over the Redskins' inexcusable 24-21 last-second loss to the New York Giants Sunday, harassed Herman yesterday indicated he's done with his nice guy role and from now on out he'll show his Redskins the "Mr. Hyde" part of his makeup.

"Dumb, stupid football" Ball muttered to himself yesterday as he looked at motion pictures of the Redskins' sixth straight licking.

Ball, whose grip on the coaching reigns slips with every Redskin defeat, didn't single out any player in his soliloquy. He moaned loudest, however, when he saw how Harry Dowda and Chuck Drazenovich stood idly by and permitted Bill Swiacki to get up and run 12 yards for the tying touchdown after being knocked down by Drazenovich and Dowda.

"What in the world could they have been thinking about?" he asked himself as the pictures showed a groggy Swiacki stagger to his feet and practically walk to the goal line as Drazenovich and Dowda did absolutely nothing but watch him.

If Swiacki had been held down after catching Chuck Conerly's pass on the Redskins' 12-yard line, the ball would have gone over to the Redskins with two minutes to play, and a 21-14 lead with it.

Then, of course, it wouldn't have been necessary for Sammy Baugh to pass to Hugh Taylor and for him to lateral to Charlie Justice and for Justice to have lateraled the ball which wound up in the Giants' hands, paving the way for Ray Poole's 40-yard winning field goal in the last four seconds.

"That's football, I guess," Ball mumbled, "but what a helluva way to lose a game. We may lose some more this year but I'll guarantee we won't get beat that way again."

Ball fined Justice and Taylor $50 apiece for tossing laterals. It's an automatic fine on the Redskins and Justice was warned about it three weeks ago.

Quantico Hit By Limit on Officers

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Quantico and Camp Lejeune's family football battle on the Marine Corps birthday this Friday won't be made any friendlier by an order issued by Gen. Clifton B. Cates, commandant.

It reiterates the Navy's old 50 percent rule—that is, a team can't be composed of more than half officers and half enlisted men. In football, only five officers may be on the field at one time.

The order even includes a penalty. It states . . . "the excess officer or officers shall be removed from the game and a 15-yard penalty inflicted on the offending team."

Quantico's the team that will be hit hard Friday. The Virginia Marines primarily depend on their former college stars. They have 23 of these and 22 are officers.

On the other hand, Camp Lejeune has 30-odd former collegiate performers with just three in the commissioned ranks. A host of good boys wound up at Lejeune when the organized reserve units were called to active duty.

Agganis at Lejeune

One of the North Carolina base's brighter lights is brilliant Harry Agganis from Boston U. He even has an old B. U. pass receiver on the team with him, End Tom Lavery.

General Cates explained his action last night. "There's nothing new about the rule, it's been on the books. With All-Navy competition canceled, Quantico wanted to know if it still stood. It does."

General Cates, one of the most decorated men in Maine Corps history and one-time tackle at the University of Tennessee, admitted enforcement doesn't figure to help Quantico any.

He explained that the rule only applies when Marine or Navy teams compete against each other.

That complicates Coach Hal Harwood's job. In rolling over seven of eight opponents he's been using the best men available. The cohesion the units have built up now is threatened.

You know how the service is, an order's an order and nobody at Quantico would make any criticism.

Before practice, though, Harwood did allow that the game there Friday would be "plenty tough."

"It's like starting the season all over," said Handsome Hal. "With a key injury here or there, we easily could get in bad shape. I know I'm going to have to do some mighty juggling."

Quantico has been playing three enlisted men on its first offensive team; four on the defensive team.

A spy at the Virginia base reported that it's the enlisted men who are burned up over the rule. "Even though it means they'll be playing more than they have all year, they're sore because it will hurt the team," he reported.

They never have pulled any rank in athletics at Quantico. On trips, the officers and men bunk together and rank is never mentioned. They feel that's the only successful way to operate.

Now, it might make the job of substituting easier if the boys wear bars or chevrons right under their numbers.

Carolina Game Big One for Maryland

MARYLAND COMES up this week to the game that it would rather win than any other—its clash with North Carolina University at Chapel Hill Saturday.

Coach Jim Tatum of Maryland was a star tackle at Carolina. Later he was assistant coach there. Since Tatum has been at Maryland, Carolina has beaten the Terps in both of their meetings—by 19-0 in 1947 and 49-20 in 1948. They didn't play last year.

Entrants in The Washington Post's football contest this week will select the "Probable Score" on the Maryland-North Carolina game. The contest winner will receive two tickets to the intersectional game between Pennsylvania and Wisconsin in Philadelphia, November 18, as well as first-class, round-trip transportation for two persons.

Bucs Hope Branch Can Help Climb From 8th

By Jim Holton

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 6 (AP).—Branch Rickey—baseball's master maker of pennant teams—today took command of the National League's last-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

The husky-browed diamond mogul was named executive vice president and general manager of the gold-plated Bucs. The contract will run five years, with a clause allowing a possible five-year extension.

Neither Rickey nor Pirate President John Galbreath disclosed financial terms.

Galbreath put out word of the Rickey deal at a news conference in plush Forbes Field offices of the Pirates.

A beaming Rickey, who now for the third time is starting fresh with a club which has come to be known as a perennial tailender, shrugged off most questions about his plans for the Bucs with the statement:

"I don't know yet."

Rickey said he has not purchased any Pirate stock.

He also told newsmen he is not ready to discuss whether he will retain Billy Meyer as Pirate manager.

"I am not going to discuss manager at all," declared the former Dodger mogul.

Rickey's son, Branch, jr., joined the Pittsburgh club along with "The Mahatma."

Asked about positions to be held by young Rickey and present General Manager Roy Hamey, the former Brooklyn Dodgers executive commented:

"I'm not familiar with the titles in the club's corporate structure so I don't know what we'll call them.

"But I see nothing wrong with having two or three general managers.

"Roy will continue to do much the same job he has in the past, concentrating on players. My son will have a similar responsibility."

The 68-year-old Rickey sucked a moment on his cigar, then growled:

"But, of course, I'll be in that picture, too."

Rickey, who developed pennant winners first for the St. Louis Cardinals, resigned last week as president and general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Prior to his resignation he sold his big bloc of Brooklyn stock.

Galbreath said he first mentioned a job to Rickey while helping arrange for Rickey to sell his Brooklyn stock. The Columbus real estate tycoon and the former Dodger boss are close personal friends and fraternity brothers.

Rickey started his amazing career as a diamond mogul with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1917. By use of his growing farm system, financed by his canny trades and the use of adroit showmanship, Rickey led the Cards up the National League ladder.

By the time the thirties rolled around the Gas House Gang dominated the senior circuit.

In 1943, with the Cards on the decline and their vast farm system crippled by the war, Rickey moved to Brooklyn as general manager. Two years later he bought the stock which he sold last month.

Fellow Named Crosby Scouts for Pirates

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 6 (AP).—A telephone call summoned Branch Rickey away from the news conference at which he was presented as the new boss of the Pittsburgh Pirates today.

When he returned, Rickey told newsmen:

"That was a guy on the coast—fellow named Crosby. He's a singer.

"I told him I had a job for him if he'd quit his work out there and go to work full time for me. He said okay—stowing Monday.

"So we now have a new scout—Bing Crosby."

Crosby is part owner and vice president of the Pirates

National Hunt Races Open Meet at Middleburg Today

MIDDLEBURG, Va., Nov. 6.—An experiment in sportsmanship will get under way here tomorrow with the opening of a two-day session of racing under the banner of the newlyformed National Hunt Races.

With no help from a mutuel handle, as there is no legalized wagering in the Old Dominion, the association is offering well over $11,000 in purses for the 10 races to be contested during the two days. The final offering will be on Armistice Day, Saturday.

The opening card of three steeplechases and two flat races will be highlighted by the thirteenth running of the Battleship Steeplechase Handicap. Of the 30 original nominees, 10 have accepted the overnight issue for the 2-mile test with an added money purse of $2000.

With Mrs. S. C. Clark, jr.'s Trough Hill, an early topweighted nominee, ducking the issue in favor of the Manly Steeplechase at $3500 added money, Saturday's feature attraction, the top weight of 149 pounds will fall on Genancoke. This local representative of Paul Mellon's Rokeby Stables' has been in the money in eight of 13 trips to the post this year and in two of these efforts he was returned the winner.

Homespun handicappers, in this thoroughbred breeding and 'chasing center, feel that the Mill River Stable's Monkey Wrench is the one to beat.

The races will be run over the Glenwood Park Course, a natural amphitheater with boxes and general seating accommodations for over 4000. This section overlooks the entire course, which is currently blended in nature's colorful autumn setting. Post time for the first race on each day is 2 p. m.

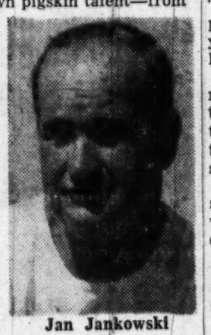
Develops His Own Talent

C. U.'s Jankowski Coach of the Week

THERE IS NO such thing as an athletic scholarship at Catholic University, and the football players who turn out for the Cardinal team are strictly the play-for-fun variety.

Coach Jan Jankowski has to develop his own pigskin talent—from scratch. For the fine showing his team made Saturday afternoon, winning, 33-0, from a game Gallaudet team, Jan has been selected as The Washington Post's Coach of the Week.



Jan Jankowski

This is Jan's second season as CU mentor. His team has won 2, tied 1, and lost 2, this fall, a highly successful season by CU standards.

Before coaching at CU, Jankowski was at Central High. He developed undefeated city championship teams in 1941 and 1942 and won again in 1948.

Jan had a notable career as an all-around athlete in high school and college. He was star halfback and captain of the Catholic U. football team in 1933. He organized the first golf team at Catholic, was its captain for four years. He also captained the freshman basketball team but a shoulder injury forced him to give up basketball in 1933.

Aside from his football activities, Jan is best known to sports fans for his outstanding game of golf. Last summer he astounded friends by turning in a 5-below-par 67 on the tough Prince Georges Country Club layout.

Ennis, Player of Week, On Video Tonight

Filly Would Have Been Selima Hope

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

PIMLICO, Nov. 6.—The Regret, today's feature race, honored the only filly to win the Kentucky Derby, but the name had another meaning to Trainer D. B. Midkiff.

He saddled Circle M. Farm's Greek Pass and watched the chestnut filly trim Belair Stud's Vulcania and three other top-flight 2-year-olds.

The race filled Midkiff with regret for it proved that Greek Pass would have been hard to beat in the Selima Stakes at Laurel. The daughter of Helipolis finished three lengths ahead of Vulcania, which was second to Aunt Jinny in the rich Selima.

On that day Greek Pass had to stay in her barn because somebody in the Circle M Farm organization failed to keep up the Selima nomination payments which would have kept her eligible. In fact, Midkiff had Greek Pass shipped from Kentucky to Maryland in the belief that she was entitled to a place at the post in the State's biggest juvenile race.

Catalano Stars

Todays' outing was only the second of Greek Pass' career. She won by five lengths in her debut at Keeneland in an overnight field. In beating Vulcania, Greek Pass carried only 104 pounds to her rival's 112, but she won impressively.

Vulcania was one of several heavily-backed favorites to fall by the wayside today. The daughter of Some Chance was odds-on and backers of Greek Pass, collected an $8.20 mutuel.

Over a fast track and before a crowd of 9519, Greek Pass was clocked in 1:46 4/5 for the mile and a sixteenth. Apprentice Augustino Catalano, who refuses to be awed by the fact that Joe Culmone is riding here, put up a "million dollar" effort aboard the winner.

With Garden State now closed, Pimlico apparently drew a smattering of the Philadelphia trade. However, some of the day's profits went into discard as the result of a minus show pool in the feature which forced the track to shell out $1737.90 to make up the $2.20 show mutuels required by law.

But It's Up to Boys

Oklahoma President, Coach Against Post-Season Game

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 6 (AP).—Oklahoma's football coach and president said today they were against the undefeated Sooners playing in a post-season bowl game but emphasized the decision was up to the players.

Dr. George L. Cross, president, said if a bowl invitation is received, he hopes it will be turned down.

Coach Bud Wilkinson, whose team has won 27 straight and is No. 3 in the Nation, said he was in complete accord with Dr. Cross.

However, both pointed out it was their personal opinion and it was strictly up to the boys whether they want to accept a bowl bid.

Oklahoma has played in the Sugar Bowl the past two years, defeating North Carolina and Louisiana State.

Although the Sooners still have four games left, there has been talk of returning to the Sugar Bowl and of playing in the Cotton Bowl.

"After our season ends and if we receive a bowl bid, the team will vote on whether to play a post-season game," Wilkinson said. "Then if it wants to go, they can vote on which Bowl to attend if there is more than one offer."

Wilkinson emphasized that it must be a unanimous vote of the players.

C. Ross said:

"We have gone to the Sugar Bowl the past two years and I think that is probably enough. With four months of football in the fall and two months of spring practice, that makes six months. That's too much football.

Cross said the financial returns were hardly worth the effort. Oklahoma received $96,000 for the last Bowl appearance, but after expenses, the net was less than $25,000 to the university.

Cross also pointed out that Wilkinson had promised he would coach the West team in the annual Shrine Bowl East-West postseason game. "I'd like for Bud to go ahead with that," he said.

"Too much football is just like too much lemon meringue pie."

In preliminaries, Middleweight Clarence Hinnant knocked out Nat Jamieson in 1:24 of the second round; Welterweight Paddy Bullock scored a TKO over Jimmy Briscoe in 1:22 of the second round, and in a five-rounder, Lightweight Pat Thomas decisioned Little Dynamite.

Russell Indicted for Contempt Of Kefauver Committee

Chicago racketeer Harry Russell was indicted yesterday on 60 counts of contempt of the Kefauver crime investigating committee.

Each count represented a question that Russell refused to answer when he testified before the committee at an open hearing here September 22.

If convicted, Russell faces a maximum penalty of one year in jail plus a $1000 fine on each count of the indictment, the first returned as a result of the committee's investigations.

In its interim report, the Kefauver committee charged that Chicago gangsters used Russell to muscle into the "lush Miami territory" controlled by the multi-million dollar S & G gambling syndicate.

Russell obtained a "substantial interest in the S & G syndicate under most suspicious circumstances," the committee report said.

A Chicago newspaper recently reported that in that city's underworld the big gambling bosses "reluctantly have decided that they may have to sacrifice Russell to a prison term to keep themselves in the clear."

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz, who will prosecute the case, said Russell is reported to be in Miami. He said he had asked an assistant United States Attorney in Miami to hold Russell under $10,000 bond when arrested. Extradition papers are en route to Florida now, Hitz said.

'Thanksgiving for Freedom' Planned by Sesqui Group

A "Thanksgiving for Freedom" week, culminating on November 22, Thanksgiving Day eve, will commemorate the official 150th birthday of Washington as the National Capital.

It was on November 22, 1800, that President John Adams and a joint session of the Sixth Congress formally established Washington as the capital in a ceremony in the uncompleted Capitol.

The National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission, which will sponsor a commemorative program on the evening of the anniversary, has asked schools, civic clubs, churches and other organizations to mark the occasion by special observances during the week of November 19.

Sesqui officials yesterday announced an essay contest in connection with the "Thanksgiving" events. Contestants will select a Washington historical event of the past 150 years as the most significant in the progress of the United States as a bulwark of freedom.

The best 12 statements supporting such selections will be chosen by the Sesquicentennial Commission's national history committee, headed by Dean Elmer L. Kayser of George Washington University.

The contest, which closes at midnight, November 15, is open to any resident of the Greater Washington area. Entries, limited to 100 words, may be sent to the National Capital Sesquicentennial Freedom Anniversary Contest, Room 1205, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Two notes, addressed to Hopewell, Va., were found on the dresser in the room. In them he said he was tired of living and "tired of working in that musty old file room," according to police. They said he was a clerk at the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Dr. MacDonald said Walston had been suffering from asthma. Police are trying to locate his sister and a niece in Hopewell.

Brown Guilty Of 2d Degree Murder in Bat Slaying

Faces 15 Years To Life Sentence; Jury Rejects Insanity Plea

Charlie H. (Three Finger) Brown, 55, was convicted yesterday of second-degree murder in the ball-bat slaying of Raymond E. (Big Red) Lewis, a flophouse manager.

The District Court jury deliberated 95 minutes before returning the verdict. Under it, Brown faces a sentence of from 15 years to life imprisonment.

As the jury was polled, Brown, a 9th st. derelict and chronic drunkard, appeared disgusted. But when it was over he smiled a toothless grin and shook hands with his attorneys.

Using a newly-purchased baseball bat, Brown bashed in the face of Lewis, who was lying on the Mall near the Smithsonian Institution on June 30. Police discovered Brown sleeping some 200 feet from the scene of the murder.

He gave police a full confession, stating that his motive was revenge. Brown said he believed Lewis had swindled him out of proceeds of a $60 Veterans pension check and had once booted him out of a 9th st. flophouse.

On the witness stand, Brown said that he had been completely drunk at the time of the killing. He said he remembered buying the bat, but merely wished to "work Lewis over," but not to kill him.

He said he could not remember making the confession because of his drunkeness, but police and other officials said he was not intoxicated, although he smelled of alcohol.

Two psychiatrists testified he was sane, but one stated that Brown was insane and acted under an irresistible impulse when he killed.

Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin argued that all of the evidence of first-degree murder, which carries the death penalty were present. He scoffed at the defense of "alcoholic amnesia."

Defense Attorney John M. Webster urged the jury to find that Brown was insane at the time of the killing.

After the jury was discharged, Webster asked Foreman William Goldwyn, 3725 Macomb st. nw., whether the jury had given much weight to the defendant's mental condition.

"It helped," replied Goldwyn. "Otherwise it would have been first-degree."

Man Ordered Held in Slaying At Dice Game

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered Robert Fearington, 37, held for grand jury action in the fatal shooting of Alex Martin, 39, Sunday night in a dice game argument.

Martin, whose address was given by police as 1225 Irving st. nw., was shot in the chest by a .38-caliber revolver in an argument over a $10 bill in Fearington's second floor room at 1909 14th st. nw.

Martin was pronounced dead at the scene by a Gallinger Hospital physician. Fearington later surrendered to police at the Thirteenth Precinct station.

According to Lieut. Richard Relber of the homicide squad, witnesses at the inquest said Martin had thrown the bill to the floor to bet a number being rolled and both men claimed it.

"Something must have snapped"

James N. Eshelman, 49, was charged yesterday in Municipal Court with stealing more than $16,000 from two safes in the Coca-Cola Co. plant at 400 7th st. sw.

The case against Eshelman, who has been a cashier for the firm for almost 30 years, was continued until November 22. Bond was set at $2000 by Judge George D. Neilson.

At the proceedings, Defense Attorney Hans A. Nathan told Judge Neilson:

"In my opinion, he (Eshelman) is ill. Something must have snapped."

Eshelman was arrested in Athens, Ohio, Saturday. More than $13,000 was in his possession and was recovered.

Baby Crop Taxes Cribs; Dressers Used

Arlington Hospital has been host to such a bumper crop of births this month that the hospital nursery yesterday started using dresser drawers to supplement cribs.

First youngster to get dresser-drawer space is the infant daughter—and fourth child—of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Hyde, of 1616 Tyler ave., Falls Church.

Arlington Hospital Administrator John Anderson said so far this month 34 babies have been born at the hospital.

That rate would set the month's total—if the trend continues—at about 160 births.

The all-time high at the hospital was established by last month's total of 134 births.

"If the present situation continues," Anderson joked, "we're going to concentrate on dressers instead of cribs. You get five drawers to a dresser."

Anderson said the hospital this spring would formally open a drive for a $400,000 hospital wing that would double facilities from 115 to 230 beds.

The lack of space for patients, said Anderson, has been getting "progressively worse for the past 14 months."

Michael Shortley Named as FSA Region Director

A veteran of World War I, Shortley directed vocational rehabilitation matters for veterans from 1919 to 1930, when he took up research work in the coal mining industry. Five years later he began work with the Social Security Administration's Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, becoming its assistant director in charge of field activities.

He was appointed director of FSA's Office of Vocational Rehabilitation when it was established in 1943. He lives at 3250 Arcadia pl. nw. with his wife and five children. His eldest son, Michael J. Shortley, jr., is in the oil business in Pakistan.

Jury Indicts Lawyer on Fraud Count

Accused of Taking $4054 From Estate Of Client Under False Pretenses

A grand jury indicted a lawyer yesterday on a charge of embezzling $4054.86 from a client's estate.

He is Lewis E. Barns, 541 Florida ave. nw.

Barnes was charged with "fraudulently converting and appropriating" the money from the estate of Odessa Hinton. Barnes was appointed executor of the estate in January, 1947.

When the will was filed for probate, Barnes was ordered by the District Court to pay $529 for funeral expenses. This order was appealed. The U. S. Court of Appeals upheld the District Court and ordered Barnes to distribute $3525.78 to all beneficiaries named in the will.

None of the money was distributed, police said.

Forgery Charged

In other indictments returned yesterday, the grand jury charged Morris A. Katz, 800 K st. nw., with forging a prescription for narcotic drugs.

Katz was seriously injured in an automobile accident earlier in the year and became addicted to narcotic during a three-month hospital stay, police said. He is the owner and operator of the Deluxe Cafeteria, at the K st. address.

James McLean, 22, 1636 4th st. nw., was indicted on a charge of assaulting Pvt. Charles G. Hood of No. 4 Precinct, at 6th and K sts. nw., on the morning of September 30.

Nancy Golden, 9, of 1816 Swann st. nw., received a fractured left arm, when she ran into the path of a taxi, driven by Edward Glover, 46, of 3825 W st. nw., at 19th and Swann sts. nw. At Children's Hospital her condition was called good.

Five persons were injured, one seriously, in two separate accident on the Franconia rd., near Franconia, Fairfax County.

State Dept. Officer Cleared Of Boy's Sex Assault Charge

Eugene Desvernine, 34, suspended State Department officer, was cleared yesterday of charges that he sexually assaulted a 13-year-old on September 14 in East Potomac Park.

A grand jury refused to indict him for violation of the Miller Act, the so-called sexual psychopath statute, after the boy reportedly told conflicting stories.

Desvernine was acting officer in charge of Caribbean affairs and was suspended immediately after the incident.

Desvernine waived his immunity and testified before the grand jury. He denied the charge and said he had picked up the boy as a hitchhiker and had been directed by him to Hains Point as the way to his home.

State Department investigators reported that the boy has a record as a juvenile delinquent.

Red Cross Building Approved

NCPPC Indorses Site on E Street For Million-Dollar D. C. Chapter House

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday approved site plans for the District chapter, American Red Cross, building to be erected on E st. between 20th and 21st sts. nw.

The plans for the million-dollar model chapter house are essentially the same as those approved two years ago, according to John Nolen, jr., NCPPC director of planning.

The four-story, limestone structure will contain 42,000 square feet of office space. It is understood a contract already has been let for the building, Nolen said.

The NCPPC also approved a plan for improving and widening the entrance to Georgetown at 28th and M sts. nw. where Pennslyvania ave. merger with M st.

Involved in the plan is the American Oil Co., and the moving back from the apex of a triangle —including the site of the old Boys Club of Georgetown—of an oil station. An area about 25 by 50 feet at the apex of the triangle would be transferred to park use.

In other action the NCPPC approved acquisition of parcels of land totaling 800 acres in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties for stream valley parks. They included two in Montgomery — Sligo Branch and Rock Creek — and three in Prince Georges — Sligo Branch, Paint Branch and Northwest Branch. No purchase price was given.

Approval was also given to plans for acquisition of all lands within the "taking lines" for George Washington Memorial Parkway within Montgomery County.

Col. Vincent E. Stack, NCPPC land purchasing officer, announced approval of purchasing contracts for two lots on 46th st. nw., between Massachusetts ave. and Van Ness st., for the planned Friendship Playground; and for three lots in the Brookmont subdivision for addition to the George Washington Memorial Parkway in Montgomery County, subject to further approval by the Maryland-NCPPC.

Condemnation proceedings were also approved for two parcels of land desired for the right of way for Klingle Valley Parkway, and several others in the Fort Reno area.

The commission limited its meeting to one day to permit out-of-town members to vote today.

Removal of Baby Boy's Tumor Here Believed to Be Record

The Washington Post
Fifteen-Month-Old Carlton Wakefield, jr., in hospital

Surgical removal of a cancerous tumor from the pancreas gland of a 15-month-old boy was reported yesterday by Children's Hospital doctors.

A search of pediatric records, they said, failed to uncover any previous report of a similar case involving a child so young.

The patient is Carlton Wakefield, jr., son of Mrs. Jane Wakefield of 1818 Kalorama rd. nw., who has recovered from the operation but is still undergoing X-ray treatment for any malignant cells which may still remain.

Though the tumor that was cut out was larger than the normal-sized gland itself, the doctors said, the surgeon was able to save almost all the gland's normal tissue, and the gland's normal functions are returning.

The pancreas is a fish-shaped gland near the backbone and above the waistline. It supplies insulin to the bloodstream for the conversion of sugar to energy, and a digestive fluid to the intestines to aid digestive processes. Man cannot live long without it, even with administration of its known products in replacement therapy.

The boy first became sick about a month ago, his doctors said. When sent to the hospital for examination, he was found to have small mass in the upper abdomen, and clinical signs showed that the gland was not distributing its secretions.

The fast-growing tumor was described as about the size of a pingpong ball when first felt by the surgeon. In the period of 48 hours, it had doubled its size, and was the size of a man's fist when it was cut out last Saturday, the doctors said.

Laboratory diagnosis showed it to be a cancerous growth enveloping a cyst. Bleeding into the cyst had apparently caused the sudden increase of its size, the doctors explained.

The patient, his doctors said, will be well enough to go home in another week.

Mother Given Beloff Child's Custody on 1-Year Trial Basis

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Taking his cue from the Old Testament, Judge James R. Kirkland yesterday awarded heiress Sylvia Beloff, 7, to her mother for a year probationary period.

Then, to make certain that the child's interests are protected, the District Court jurist assigned Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer to serve as guardian for the child.

Mrs. May Beloff Spivak, 33, the child's mother, wept when the judge made his decision. Arm in arm, the black-haired child and mother walked from the court.

The custody case was on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus sought by Mrs. Spivak after the recent death of Simon Beloff, real estate man, who had divorced her for adultery.

Evidence Bitter

The judge made it plain that she had not helped her chances when she married Leon Spivak, the corespondent in the divorce trial.

The evidence in the custody case was bitter. The attorneys repeatedly pointed out that Sylvia's children will get the bulk of the fortune and that Sylvia herself has a yearly income of $1000 a year from it.

Fighting for the child were Mrs. Spivak and Sylvia's second cousin, Philip Malkin, a $10,000-a-year New York advertising executive.

Financial Motive Denied

Malkin said that he was not motivated by financial considerations but considered it a "blessed" thing to take care of the child. A possible legatee to four fifteenths of the estate, Malkin acknowledged that he decried only the fact that the mother had married Spivak.

Judge Kirkland said that much of the "law" of the case was found in the Bible. Especially, he pointed to the episode where Solomon decided the custody case at the point of a sword and to the story of Moses in the bullrushes.

At one point in the case, Judge Kirkland asked Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld to try to settle the matter. But because the parties would not abide by the rabbi's findings, the judge did not read the clergyman's report, until after the judge decided the case.

Oddly enough, Rabbi Gerstenfeld's decision was that the mother should get Sylvia for a "trial period."

The judge drew a parallel from the Solomon story in that, originally, Mrs. Spivak, through her attorneys, refused to be bound by Rabbi Gerstenfeld's subsequent decision. Judge Kirkland pointed out that in the biblical story, the other was willing to give up custody lest the child lose its life.

The judge then said that when Moses' mother put her child in the bullrushes, she sent along a daughter to be certain that the child would come into good hands. When the daughter found the child, the daughter reported to the mother that it was in good hands.

That, said Judge Kirkland, was Newmyer's function in the case, to see that the child was well cared for.

The Malkins, Judge Kirkland said had three children of their own and might scorn Sylvia.

"Such comments bite into a child's fiber and grates into her being," he said.

Has Ample Funds

Mrs. Spivak had testified that she had ample funds to care for her daughter, but of this, the judge said:

"It wouldn't matter to the court if she sold newspapers and had an income of $1 a week, just so she proved a fit and proper mother."

Judge Kirkland said that Sylvia appeared to be "physically retarded" and he especially noticed her thin legs.

"She needs attention more than mere bread and water to nourish the body," he said.

The judge charged Newmyer to see that the child sleeps, not on a couch in the Spivak bedroom, where she now spends her nights, but in a bed. Sylvia must be sent to school and be brought up according to the Hebrew tradition, the judge said.

Judge Kirkland recently declared that under the setup of the court, custody cases often do not get ample consideration. He wants a Family Court, with two new judges appointed to handle all domestic litigation.

Mrs. Beloff was represented by the law firm of Koonin & Gordon, Malkin was represented by Kamerow & Kamerow.

$300 Stolen From Storage Office Safe

Thieves stole $300 in cash from an office safe at the Standard Transfer & Storage Co., 4th and Bryant sts. ne. during the weekend, William B. Doster, president, told police yesterday.

Using a drill they found in the warehouse, the thieves first drilled a circle of holes in the safe, punched the center through and reached in to remove the money.

They entered by breaking a window on the east end of the warehouse sometime between 1 p. m. Saturday and 7 a. m. Monday, Doster said.

Wives Don't Appear, Bigamy Trial Delayed

The bigamy trial of Gerald B. Wright, 40, of 210 Maple rd., Morningside, Md., scheduled to start yesterday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court in Marlboro, was postponed indefinitely when neither of his wives appeared in court.

The charge was brought against Wright, an area circulation manager for The Washington Post, on the complaint of Mrs. Jean Wright, who accused him of bigamy after learning the identity of another wife, Mrs. Imogene Wright.

Wright's bond of $1000 was continued pending rescheduling of the case.

Arlington Reports Two New Polio Cases

Two new cases of polio were reported in Arlington yesterday to raise the county total to 36 for the year.

One polio sufferer, a 12-year-old girl from the 2200 block of N. Columbus st., was admitted to Children's Hospital November 1. The second case, a 33-year-old woman from the 4800 block of S. 29th st., was admitted to Gallinger Hospital last Friday.

AWOL Soldier Held in Rape Of 11-Year-Old Bethesda Girl

Richard Lee Beall, 19, an Army private AWOL from his post in Alaska, yesterday was held without bond on a charge of criminally assaulting an 11-year-old Bethesda girl.

The attack took place in the girl's home, where Beall's parents live in a basement apartment. The parents of both were out at the time, Montgomery County police said.

After the assault, the girl ran crying to next-door neighbors, who called police. She was taken to Suburban Hospital, where her condition was described as good.

Beall was arrested about an hour later on the street near his home. He told police he came home on leave last August after his sister, Mrs. Elaine Sherry, was killed in an auto accident here and never had reported back to Alaska. A hearing on the rape charge will be held in Bethesda Police Court Friday.

Pepco Contracts Termed Unfair By AFL Officer

Union Spokesman Tells PUC Session Utility Is Breaking Down Pay Structure

The Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday was accused of awarding contracts "unfairly and uneconomically" by an AFL Central Labor Union spokesman.

J. C. Turner, vice president of the labor group, said Pepco has awarded most of its contracts for extending conduits on a cost-plus basis to two local firms the past several years.

One of the firms, Turner declared, is "breaking down the wage structure here" by paying "substandard wages."

Turner leveled his attack on Pepco at a Public Utilities Commission hearing of the company's petition for an overall 9.2-percent rate increase.

The prolonged hearings, which began August 21, will resume at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

'Boondoggling' Claimed

Turner said one of the contractors is paying truck drivers below the going rate. "I don't see why the company should be favored by Pepco," said Turner, adding that the contractor did some "boondoggling operations" to run up the sum it could charge Pepco for the job.

Awarding work on a cost-plus basis, he said, was "unfair" and "uneconomical" and ultimately placed "a burden" on the consumer.

Turner conceded the power company deserved "some small increases."

Later James H. Ferry, Pepco president, told reporters the power company did have "running contracts" with the two firms mentioned by Turner. Other firms seldom responded when jobs were advertised, Ferry explained.

Some Pepco jobs in Virginia have been awarded competitively, Ferry said.

Bernd Opposes Boost

Another witness, Walter E. Bernd, of the Terminal Refrigeration and Warehouse Corp. also took the stand to oppose the requested rate boost. The proposed rates, he said, would increase the company's annual power bill by 8 percent and would mean a 35-percent higher bill than the company paid in 1943.

The remainder of the day saw Pepco and Capital Transit Co. lawyers wrangling over accounting details, as they have since the hearing opened.

CTC is fighting Pepco's proposal here to increase the transit company's power bill by 58 percent. CTC attorneys are countering with a demand for a $109,000 annual reduction in their power bill.

V. A. McElfresh, PUC chief accountant, will be leadoff witness Wednesday.

Baby Saved, Too

'Dead' Mother Revived by Quick Action

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Columbia Hospital doctors yesterday disclosed that the life of a mother they had pronounced dead was saved by surgical delivery of her unborn child.

The woman, they said, was "clinically dead" when the surgeon operated in emergency haste to salvage the life of her baby.

Both mother and child are "out of danger" now, and will show no lasting effect from the experience the doctors said.

Evidence Mother Still Lived

Dr. Preston Haynes, chief of the hospital's obstetrical service, credited the "post-mortem" operation with saving both lives. Slow but unmistakable bleeding as he cut into the mother to remove the child was the first clinical evidence she was still alive, he said.

Some seven to 10 minutes before, he and two other attending physicians had pronounced her dead when they could detect no breathing, pulse or blood-pressure, he reported.

"We wouldn't have performed the operation (to save the still-living baby) if we hadn't believed the mother was dead," he declared.

Time a Precious Factor

Such post-mortem operations are standard procedure when the mother dies during delivery stages of pregnancy, he explained. Time is the precious factor, since the infant may die within five to seven minutes after the mother's body fails to supply it needed oxygen.

Dr. Haynes and Dr. Leroy McDowell, a resident physician who assisted in the operation, disclaimed any miracle in the drama. Any lifesaving, they agreed, could be attributed only to modern operating room facilities and techniques.

Identity of the patient was withheld, but she was described as a 30-year-old woman in first pregnancy. Her child, a girl, weighed six pounds 15 ounces.

Doctors said the patient was admitted on Saturday, October 28, suffering pregnancy poisoning. A Caesarian section operation to deliver the child was scheduled for the next morning.

Anesthesia Injected

The patient, they said, apparently "succumbed" some few minutes after injection of a spinal anesthesia, recorded at 11:15 a. m. that Sunday. Dr. Haynes placed the time of "death" at between 11:20 and 11:25 a. m.

"You can't watch a clock in such emergencies," he said.

The surgical incision which disclosed she was still alive was made two minutes before the recorded Caesarian birth, at 11:34 a. m., he said, seven minutes after the first of several injections of heart stimulants failed to produce any detectable response in the patient.

Even as the mother lay "dead" and doctors worked to save the child, the anesthetist forced oxygen through a face mask while others applied artificial breathing movement to the woman, it was pointed out.

Court May Air Lack Of Milk Competition

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter
(Last of a Series)

One major puzzle about the District's milk market feud is the absence of price competition on home-delivered milk.

This may be aired during the hearing before District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff Wednesday at 10 a. m., since the District government plans to discuss the economic issues involved.

The price on the doorstep is generally 22 cents a quart, although a few dairies give a discount for quantity orders or special concessions to members of groups, such as Group Health Association.

Dairies selling milk only through stores are usually a few pennies cheaper than the home-delivered rate, and prices charged for school, restaurant and hotel deliveries are also lower than the doorstep price.

These price policies apply to dairies buying from the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association as well as those buying the so-called "outside" milk. Association members have charged the latter is cheaper but this has been denied by the dairies.

The 2-to-3-cent cheaper "store" milk has attracted many economy-minded consumers. At present about a third of all retail sales are through stores, according to market authorities. There is usually no differential, though, on regular brand milk sold in stores.

One of the few places where there has been price competition has been on bids for governmental contracts. The association offers its milk for such use at a few dollars per hundredweight less than that used for retail sales in an effort to meet competition of independents

Until recently, the District government accepted "outside" milk on such contracts, but specifications have been changed and now require a D. C.-inspected supply.

As for the Federal Government, the specifications state that milk rated by United States Public Health Service is acceptable, but another clause reads:

"In the event that raw milk is transported to a pasteurizing plant in a locality other than its origin, the raw milk shall comply with all the requirements of the local ordinances of the point of delivery."

Since this is the manner in which milk is handled here, some dairymen have interpreted this clause as making use of D. C.-inspected milk mandatory at governmental installations.

Another place where competition seems wanting is on butterfat content. The District requires a 3.5 percent minimum, but Health Department reports indicate the range on home deliveries is from 3.8 to 4.1 percent.

Why? Well, when there is no price differential, customers make their choice on taste and concern over retaining customers, forces dairies to keep the butterfat content above the minimum. That is the analysis of dairy market observers.

Is 22 cents high? Three comparable cities—in that they are located in a milkshed—are Chicago, Kansas City, Mo., and St. Louis. Retail prices there last month, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, were 21.5 cents, 19 cents and 21 cents, respectively, while Washington paid 22. All three, incidentally, admit USPHS Grade A milk, according to the Public Health Service.

In closer communities, BAE reported retail prices last month were 21.5 cents in Baltimore and Philadelphia and 23.5 in New York. The last named has had an increase since then.

The average delivered price in 24 major cities early in October averaged 20.7 cents a quart, BAE reported. The average buying price for Class I milk of 3.5 percent butterfat in more than 100 cities was $4.79 per hundredweight. In Washington it was $6.13 or $6.43 for 4 percent butterfat.

About 85 percent of all milk sold in the District comes from members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, a Cooperative avowedly interested in the welfare of its farmer members.

Commissioners Consider Lane Milk Letter Today

District Commissioners will consider a letter from Maryland Governor William Preston Lane, jr., on their milk market ruling at their meeting this morning.

Governor Lane asked the Commissioners Saturday on what basis they could permit milk to be sold in Maryland "when that milk was not regarded of a quality fit to be sold in the District of Columbia."

The members, however, do not have a $6.43 per hundredweight take home pay. They are paid a blend price derived by determining how much of the farmer's milk goes into (1) fluid milk (2) cream and cottage cheese or (3) ice cream and similar products. The lower classifications bring in lesser pay.

However, if the association's current 32,000-gallon a day surplus, which now goes into the lower classification uses, was needed for fluid milk consumption, the return to association members would increase substantially.

The result, according to testimony in the Federal Government's conspiracy case against the Association, is that area milk consumers tend to subsidize the lower price of the manufactured products by paying a high enough fluid milk price to give the farmers adequate take home pay.

The effect of Washington's retail price on consumption is difficult to determine. The national average per capita consumption of milk per day is .89 pint, while Greater Washington's last year was computed as .9 pint.

Apparently producing for the D. C. market has its advantages since 139 farms were added to the District permit list in the year from October 1949 to last month and about 500 farms in the five-year period from 1945, according to the District Health Department.

A new element in the milk situation is concentrated milk, now making its debut in Wilmington, Del., in a test. If successful, its sponsor, National Dairy, would be likely to bring it to other cities through its many outlets such as Chestnut Farms Dairy here.

The milk comes in the form of a white fluid with the consistency of cream. Two parts water are added and the end result is indistinguishable from the usual type milk, according to a Wall Street Journal sampler.

Such milk could cut the cost of milk distribution by eliminating home deliveries.

Santa Claus Triplets Train For Children's Quiz Barrage

The Washington Post

SNEAK PREVIEW—Karen Lindblom, 5½, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Lindblom, of 4212 47th pl., Bellemead, takes a fast look into the name book kept by Santa Claus for "good little girls and boys." Santas, at Hecht's (from left) are Percy J. Bobbitt, Alton Loomis and Joseph Preston

It's getting around to "you-better-watch-out" time for junior.

So it's only November, so what? Santa Claus has to get back in practice, doesn't he?

At the Hecht Company, Santa Claus is getting used to working toys, puffing out his cheeks, laughing heartily, and figuring out how to give the right answers to 16 zillion questions from Washington's younger set between now and Christmas.

The thing about the Hecht Company S. C. is that he is triplets.

That will insure enough Santas to go around in both the Hecht Company downtown store, where Santas will work in shifts, and its Silver Spring branch.

And the reason S. C. is making such an unseasonal appearance, the Hecht Company explains, is because: "Playing the role of a department store Santa Claus these days requires more than the strength to perch four to five hundred children per day on your knee. A modern-day Santa has to know child psychology."

Yesterday, Hecht's three modern-day Santas had most of their answers lined up and are about ready to start giving them out. On Saturday, the Silver Spring Santa will start in, arriving by special train at the B&O station there at 10:18 a. m., and proceeding by miniature B&O train to the store.

The Santa who will do this is Joseph Preston of 3969 Fessenden st. nw. Santa Preston in non-North Pole locale is a liaison officer for the Senate press gallery.

Dean of the Santas is Percy J. Bobbitt, 1324 E st. ne.

Father of six children, he has been playing Santa for 13 years. When he isn't doing that, he is an optical stock supervisor in the Government.

The third Santa is Alton Loomis, 1409 48th ave. se., a former merchant seaman, who usually—or at least for the last decade—has been spending his Christmases in places like Persia, Arabia, etc

Importance Of Lighting Is Discussed

An enlightening discussion of light was conducted yesterday at the Library of Congress by the first of five experts speaking this week on the relationship of environment to work.

Willard C. Brown, manager of the engineering division, lamp department, General Electric Co., cited the results to be obtained from proper lighting in homes, offices and stores.

He reviewed a study made in 1947 by the General Services Administration in which it was revealed that workers in the Bureau of Internal Revenue upped their productivity by 50 percent when their office lighting environment was improved.

Bright, reflecting surfaces—glossy papers, glass-topped desks—must be discarded if working conditions in offices are to bring maximum efficiency, Brown said.

Administrator Jess Larson, of GSA, welcomed the speakers and Government architects and engineers attending the conference in Coolidge Auditorium.

Color will be the subject today, noise on Wednesday, air conditioning on Thursday and safety on Friday. Luther H. Evans, Librarian of Congress, and David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, are sponsoring the series.

Wonderful Husband Had No Interest in Other Women Until He Turned 40, Since When He's Been Flirting Indiscriminately, to Wife's Dismay; She Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About two years ago my very wonderful husband—I'll call him Paul—began casting eyes at women in general, regardless of age—anywhere from 15 to 50. He is 42 and so am I. Among our acquaintances he singles out a girl or woman, then kisses, cuddles, teases and/or pats her playfully—all quite openly. Also he carries on eye-flirtations with saleswomen in stores, or with girls or women in the streets or theater.

All this isn't like Paul at all. He never bothered about women before. Now he exerts himself to attract their attention, and as he is good looking, they do take notice. When I have protested, he chides me for giving it any importance. He says he is only having fun, trying to see how far they'll encourage him, and that he wouldn't do anything wrong. He says if I knew how some husbands behave I wouldn't fret about this little thing.

My health is affected by the fear and mental strain; and as I have been taking treatment for menopause, I spoke to the doctor about Paul's behavior. He said to talk things over with my husband, but inasmuch as Paul is making an effort to watch his behavior recently, at least around me, I don't like to cause any agitation. The doctor says it is only a phase and he will get over it; but he also says a married man shouldn't do these things.

Yesterday in the grocery store Paul carried on a little eye-flirtation with a young lady, nothing you could specify, just glances back and forth; and I can hardly stand the suspense any longer. Paul feels he is doing nothing wrong, but I am losing faith in him. Each incident of the kind kills a little of my love for him; and while I don't criticize, I find it increasingly hard to act natural about this. Our life together has been happy otherwise. Paul does so much for my benefit; takes me everywhere possible with him; really a woman couldn't ask for a better husband. So what's the answer? Please help me.

J. E.

Dear J. E.: Prior to 40, Paul never bothered about women, you say. But for the last two years he has been flagrantly "on the make" for flirtatious exchanges with females—"trying to see how far they'll encourage him," he explains. Not that he aims to do anything wrong, he maintains. What is the meaning of this mixed-up behavior? Maybe Paul honestly doesn't know; but certainly his lame version makes no sense. It can't be accepted as a true or satisfactory answer to your protest.

He is acting brashly like an ill-bred, sex-hungry adolescent, which is the more extraordinary in his middle age, in view of the fact that he has a closely devoted wife, and heretofore seemed indifferent to other women as such. This seems a paradox at first glance, but the inside story may be less contradictory.

Paul's amative behavior, from first to last, may signify (or stem from) unrecognized anxiety neurosis and inferiority feelings. In youth, such defeatist emotions might keep him from trying to compete for success with women; thus you might get the idea (and he might, too) that he wasn't much interested in them. Then in later life the same uneasy complex might drive him to play the wolf compulsively, in a desperate grab for egotonic in the realm of sex,—assuming he hasn't much of a job, or financial or social rating; or for other reasons felt a stepped-up anxiety, or sense of failure, in middle age.

Also I think it's well to consider whether you may be diluting Paul's affection for you, making yourself less attractive to him, by stewing plaintively about symptoms of ill health that you impute to menopause. Maybe you're having that experience, or maybe you are claiming it prematurely; but in any case, the less said about it, the less "consciousness" paid it (as condition or theory) outside the doctor's office, the better your chances of sustaining a good relationship with your husband, that psychologically satisfies him.

Possibly at 40 you felt ready to relinquish conjugal love-making in favor of "mother" care from your kindly husband thereafter. And maybe your nervous system provided phony symptoms of menopause as if to justify your quitter preference. In consequence, Paul might acquire a conviction of being rejected by an aging wife, and involuntarily start courting notice from other women, indiscriminately, due to neurotic need for assurance that his own good years aren't at an end (along with yours, from his viewpoint).

From the analytic angle, Paul's behavior is sick, and so is yours, for being afraid to reiterate your objections to his trifling. The only home-remedy for the situation is to talk things over, in search of insight and a more helpful adjustment to each other. But a trained psychologist to lead and umpire the discussion might bring better results, I think.

Press Club to Hear Ace War Reporter

MARGUERITE HIGGINS, the New York Herald Tribune's top woman reporter, will tell some of her exciting experiences as a foreign correspondent when she speaks to the Women's National Press Club and their guests at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m., Thursday at the Washington Hotel.

Miss Higgins outtalked General Douglas MacArthur when an edict came from his staff banning women reporters on the Korean battlefront. She went on to get some of the best stories of the war. She was on the front lines most of the time, and her by-lines have been carried by papers all over the country.

Ruth Montgomery of the New York Daily News, president of the Women's National Press Club, will preside at the luncheon, and an honored guest will be Mrs. Perle Mesta, Minister to Luxembourg.

Republican Women Hear D. C. Editor

Anyone who tolerates communism is as great a menace as the Communists themselves, Frank Waldrop, editor of the Times-Herald, said yesterday in an address before the League of Republican Women. Therefore, he said, it is the duty of Republicans to combat with all their energy an administration which since 1933 "has permitted communism to penetrate our government."

Reviewing the work of the House Un-American Activities Committee and praising it for keeping us from communism when we came "within a heartbeat of losing our country," he chided the Republicans for not having taken a more active part in committee. The committee could have been far more effective, he stressed, if it had had the greatest men of both parties.

Mr. Waldrop addressed the regular meeting of the Republican women at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. E. S. Kochersperger, vice president, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Carroll D. Kearns. Mrs. Charles Bunker introduced the speaker.

Life Insurance

Insurance is a splendid thing . . . For everyone to own . . . Especially to care for those . . . Who may be left alone . . . To guard against the tragedy . . . That gives no warning sign . . . But comes with speed and suddenness . . . To take us out of line . . . Insurance is security . . . For children and a wife . . . To comfort them for months and years . . . And possibly for life . . . It takes the husband's place on earth . . . As though he still were here . . . To bring his earnings to the door . . . Of those he held so dear . . . And it is such a small expense . . . Compared to other things . . . When we consider all the good . . . And happiness it brings.

Diplomats' Day in Party Round

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

DIPLOMATS AND OFFICIALS attended a reception held yesterday by the Ambassador of Pakistan and Mme. Ispahani in honor of the United States Ambassador to Pakistan, Avra M. Warren, and Mrs. Warren. Guests were received at the embassy between 6 and 8 p. m.

MME. ISPAHANI

The Ambassador of India, Mme. Pandit, the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Erkin, the Ambassador of Egypt and Mme. Abdul Rahim were in the gathering as well as the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jutila, and the Minister of Lebanon and Mme. Malik.

Others were the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George C. McGhee, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Rusk, the Chief of Protocol and Mrs. John Farr Simmons.

"LADIES' DAY" IN D. C.

IT WAS LADIES' DAY at the Yugoslav Embassy yesterday, and at the Venezuelan Embassy and the Legation of Syria, with three teas "for ladies only" all going on about the same time.

Mme. Popovic, wife of the Yugoslav Ambassador, introduced the ladies of the embassy staff to the circle of friends which she has made since arriving here in June. And during the course of the afternoon American friends of Mme. Popovic, headed by Miss Marguerite Griffin, suggested that they get together a committee to aid the stricken people of Yugoslavia, suffering from the drought.

Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary of State, was there in a soft dark blue taffeta frock draped in the back and worn with a tangerine-toned beret.

Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, wife of the Postmaster General, was her usual smiling self, and Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was just back—with the Secretary—from Colorado. Mrs. Leslie Biffle was taking it easy yesterday in preparation for election day when she said she expected to be up all night.

ALL THE FATTENING TEA accompaniments went the rounds on trays. There were miniature slices of layer cake with glazed caramel topping; cornucopias of crisp pastry filled with whipped cream, cone-shaped cakes covered with chocolate and whipped cream.

Other guests were Mrs. John F. Simmons, wife of the Chief of Protocol; Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Julian Gillespie, Mme. Espaillat, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, who was taking Mrs. Emil Hurja, and others on to Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith's tea; Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Jesse Saugstad, Mrs. W. D. Whittemore, Mrs. Walter Wilds, Mrs. Eldon P. King, Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, Mrs. Al Ryan, and Mrs. Norman Littell, and Mrs. Irene Caldwell.

PARTY PARADE

MRS. TRUMAN ATTENDED a tea given yesterday by Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith at the American Newspaper Women's Club. Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Smith entertained. The hostess is a member of the Women's Committee of the local chapter of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, for which Mrs. Clark has accepted the chairmanship, with Mrs. Clark Clifford serving as cochairman. Mrs. Truman is sponsor of the National Foundation and is also honorary member of the local women's committee.

Assistants of Mrs. Smith at yesterday's party were Mrs. Clifford, Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. Tom C. Clark, Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, Mrs. John R. Steelman, Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller, Mrs. Milton C. Cobey, Mrs. Samuel M. Dodek and Mrs. Seymour Jesselsohn.

CHIEF JUSTICE AND MRS. FRED VINSON were the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz entertained at dinner last evening. Today Mrs. Cafritz will give a luncheon for Dorothy Clark Norman, who is in town for a brief visit in the interests of the Knickerbocker Ball to be given in New York December 1 for the benefit of the Sister Kenney Foundation. She is staying with Mrs. Bradley Nash.

The Peruvian Ambassador, Fernando Berckemeyer, and the Spanish Ambassador at Large and Senora de Lequerica will be guests of Mr. and Mrs Cafritz in New York on Wednesday for the preview of the Goya collection at the New York Art Center.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

IN A LATE AFTERNOON CEREMONY at the Mexican Embassy yesterday, Ambassador Rafael de la Colina bestowed the Mexican Order of the Aztec Eagle on Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State.

Among those attending the ceremony were the Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnet, the Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani, the Director General of the Organization of American States and Senora de Quintanilla, the Secretary General of the OAS and Senora de Lleras, and Associate Justice and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed.

Also, Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James Edwin Webb, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Edward G. Miller, jr., the Chief of Protocol and Mrs. John Farr Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

The award was made in recognition of Mr. Welles' participation in the initial development and later application of the good-neighbor policy; for his constant attitude of absolute respect for the independence and dignity of American nations, and for his very cordial feelings toward the people of Mexico.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW

DAVID S. GRAHAM, retiring Civil Air Attache of the Australian Embassy, and Mrs. Graham, entertained at a farewell cocktail party at the Admiral Club yesterday, and at the same time welcomed Mr. Graham's successor, Frank Parker, and Mrs. Parker. Now It's Biscuits They're Cooking With New Jiffy Method: Just Stir 'n' Roll

NOW IT'S BISCUITS they're cooking with oil! As a follow-up for the "stir-n-roll" pastry introduced several months ago, a big milling company has worked out a similar, time-saving recipe for this breakfast favorite.

"It's the one great new biscuit recipe of all time," the firm bravely declares, adding the testimony of its home economics staff that the new formula makes richer, flakier biscuits than they've ever baked before. We'll leave the decision up to you, readers. Here's the recipe:

STIR-N-ROLL BISCUITS

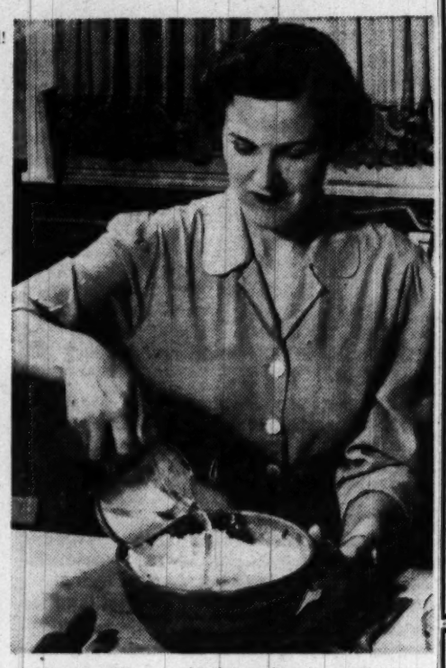
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons double-action baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup cooking (or salad) oil
2/3 cup milk

Sift flour, baking powder and salt into a bowl Pour milk and oil into measuring cup, but don' mix together. Pour all at once into the dry ingredients.

Stir with a fork until mixture cleans sides of bowl and rounds up into a ball. Smooth up by kneading about 10 times without additional flour.

With the dough on waxed paper, press out ¼-inch thick with hands or roll out between waxed papers. For a higher biscuit, roll dough ½-inch thick. Cut with unfloured biscuit cutter. For drop biscuits, after dough rounds up into ball drop with fork on cooky sheet. Bake 10 to 12 minutes on ungreased cooky sheet in very hot oven (475°). Makes about 20 medium biscuits.

For buttermilk biscuit, use only 2 teaspoons double-action baking powder, add ¼ teaspoon of soda and, of course, substitute buttermilk for sweet milk.



Oil and milk are added together to a mixture of flour, salt, and baking powder in this new quick method of making biscuits

DEAR ANNE:

Wonder if you can tell me if there is any dressmaking class in the District strictly for beginners. Have joined two or three, but find that the rest of the class always has some basic idea of dressmaking and it is difficult for the teacher to devote the necessary time to the pupil who knows absolutely nothing at all. These are called beginners' classes, but actually, I have never found one that was, literally, that. When one knows absolutely nothing about dressmaking, these classes seem very advanced. Have heard the same thing from two or three other women, so it can't just be me.

Mrs. M. F., Washington.

Fine Old Jokes

Burns and Allen Just Barely Good

By John Crosby

TELEVISION makes me nervous from time to time and, in trying to track down this particular neurosis, I have reached something approximating a conclusion. At least, this is as close to a conclusion as I ever get. I get particularly jumpy when the old entertainers approach television for the first time. I quit there, palms sweating, hoping they'll be good.

Crosby

I consider this an imposition on my good nature. It's really none of my business whether the old entertainers, the ones who were world famous in radio, are worth their salt (a word meaning $7000) in television. Still, checking around my small circle of friends, I find they do this, too. Radio is such an intimate medium that these performers become friends of the family.

I WAS STRUCK with this nervousness particularly sharply by the Burns and Allen television debut. Now, George Burns, despite all evidence to the contrary, is one of Hollywood's wittiest citizens. Their opening show, I'm told, was three months in preparation. And I can't understand what happened to all that time and all that intelligence. Not that it was a bad show. In fact, it was a pretty good one. But it didn't seem up to all that travail. The jokes were all on what you might call the middle level, as if Burns was afraid of going over our heads. They were also, I'm afraid, familiar jokes, and here again I got the feeling that this was deliberate, as if Mr. B. felt that old jokes are soothing to old customers, that a new joke might upset our digestions.

If this is the approach Burns is using, I would like to register strong disapproval. I feel affronted whenever I am treated like a backward child, and I have a hunch other listeners do, too. The Burns and Allen television show is a carefully done replica of the Burns and Allen radio show. In fact, the Burns and Allen radio program has been treated with a reverence generally accorded only the restoration of public buildings. The framework, the cornices, the furniture have all been left exactly as they were in the eighteenth century.

As a gesture toward the visible aspects of television, the Burnses had fragmentary settings of their house and the house of their next door neighbors who were, and have always been, important parts of the Burns and Allen plots. However, the goings-on in these houses are exactly as they were in the old days. Gracie still befuddles door-to-door salesmen with her terrible innocence of all practical matters. George's badinage with his announcer, Bill Goodwin, has not changed a syllable. A lot of it was very amusing, but none of it seemed to belong on television.

ONE THING I've noticed about virtually all the old radio comics, newly transferred to television. They all talk too much. George Burns even acts as narrator on his show. Well, of course, one had to have a narrator on radio to inform us that Gracie had just got back from the grocery story. But on TV, we more or less assume that Gracie has been shopping when she walks into the living room with a bagful of groceries. Still, George insisted on telling us these plainly visible things. The only explanation I have for this strange behavior is that George Burns doesn't really believe that television actually exists, that he doesn't really believe a picture is being transmitted, that he thinks the whole thing, in short, is a monumental hoax.

I say all this more in sorrow than in anger because I think Burns and Allen are two very gifted and charming comedians. And anyone who has ever talked to George Burns for 10 minutes will tell you that he is a very funny fellow. I just wish he wouldn't suppress his wit so skillfully on the air.

Miscellany Items Save Space, and Dot's Dot

When a columnist finds he has three times as much news as he has space, his only chance to hit all the high spots is this three-dot "Miscellany" technique . . . Post Reporter Ed Ryan tells me there's a revolt brewing among small fry out Bradley blvd. way. He heard four 4-year-olds solemnly vow, one after the other: "I ain't gonna take my nap today." "I ain't gonna take my nap today either". . . Vivian P. Williams of 5508 Southwick st., Bethesda, Md., who clips this column each day and mails it to her GI son in Korea reports that in a recent letter he wrote that the service was "zuper duper"—which indicates that this war, like all others, will result in some revised slang for all of us . . . Wonder if we'll ever have a war that'll result in peace? . . . Mrs. Hugh L. Elsbree of 2406 44th st. nw. tells me that her 6-year-old son, Hughie, has decided that he no longer wants to be President. The attempt on Mr. Truman's life brought forth the comment that he'd rather not be a great man if it meant that people would be shooting at him . . . My line about bus drivers who hiss their brakes at pedestrians brings a postcard from Joe Hayden of 6 Pine ave., Takoma Park, Md. He says that, just as people wonder what the catcher says to the pitcher when they confer in the middle of the infield, he wonders whether bus drivers who swap stories at the terminal are comparing notes on how many pedestrians they hissed that day . . . Mrs. Lester Kinzler of 2806 78th ave., District Heights, Md., throws her moral support to the lady at our house, who is currently struggling to balance her food budget. "Who can keep to a budget these days?" she asks. "I gave up a long time ago" . . . Russell Roller of 7135 Chestnut st. nw. says that wisecrack about the guy who could "strut sitting down" is indeed an oldie, as I indicated, but she (yep, Russell is a she) can't remember who said it. "Was it Will Rogers or Irvin Cobb?" she asks. Gerald W. Movius of the Motion Picture Association doesn't contend that he knows who said it first. He does point out that the expression is in "Cimarron," by Edna Ferber. "Yancey Cravat says it in his address to the jury at the trial of Dixie Lee." And I'll take Gerald's word for it, because I never read the book, and saw the movie when I was young enough to get in free in the company of an adult . . . Mary B. Hayden of 1617 N. Springwood dr., Silver Spring, Md., asks: "Can you identify the man who was driving bus number 5285 out 16th st. about noon last Tuesday? His courtesy and helpfulness to a blind woman led by a Seeing Eye dog deserve public commendation." Capital Transit's sleuths tell me the driver was Operator 1855, otherwise known as Albert Morck of 1355 Peabody st. nw., and a right nice guy . . . Mildred A. Gardner of 4707 Eads st. ne. says that if H. A. Willard is surprised by a bit of neighborly spirit on a crowded bus, "he's been riding the wrong line." On the Seat Pleasant-Deanwood line, she says, there's hardly a day that a sitter doesn't offer to hold packages for a standee . . . Coincidence Dept.: Mrs. L. J. Ervin of 512 Domer ave., Takoma Park, Md., wrote me that the Rolling Terrace P-TA was trying to get a piano for the children at that school and her letter arrived just as J. Scott of 632 G st. sw. was phoning to tell me that he had a piano to give away . . . I wish I could do as well for Kenneth J. Lynch, senior vice commander of Bethesda-Chevy Chase Post No. 105 of the American Legion, and Mrs. S. Sutin of 617 Vale st., Chevy Chase, Md. (Wisconsin 1591). The Legion is trying to complete its recreation facilities at "Montrose," about 4 miles beyond Bethesda on Rockville pike for the use of school children, civic organizations, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and the like (it's all for free) and Mrs. Sutin is Grade Mother of the Fourth Grade at Chevy Chase Elementary School. Anybody who has an old upright piano that isn't being used can put it to work at either of these places and win the thanks of countless children . . . Lina Coakley, wife of Cartoonist Le Baron Coakley, tells me that Coak is still trying to get his ulcers to behave, and reports from Maine that he's feeling better. Meantime Mrs. Coakley is keeping busy with her Red Cross work, and advises me that another class for Arts and Skills instructors has just started. It's held three days a week, and after a month the pupils are ready to serve as instructors themselves, and do volunteer work in Federal hospitals. Any of you ladies who'd like to lend a hand can call Mrs. Bruce Roberts on Republic 8300, extension 762 or 763 . . . Mary Epling of 5759 13th st. nw. has found a way to get even with her brother for his poem about her date with a chemistry student. Woman-like, Mary has the last word with: "My brother's virtues, I admit . . . Are models of consistency . . . But when we've dishes to be dried . . . A tower of resistance, he."

ELECTION DAY BLUES

Thank goodness we District Liners don't have to waste time voting. It keeps us busy enough just earning enough money to pay our taxes.

EASING THE BURDEN?

I'm getting stronger again. Just a few short weeks ago I couldn't even lift $10 worth of groceries; today I can carry them up three flights of stairs with ease.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

I'd like to get my hands on the guy who finally tipped off the weatherman that this is November and not June.

Vaughan Met Old Enemy on Wake

By Drew Pearson

One of the unwritten and unknown incidents of the Wake Island conference is what Gen. Harry Vaughan said to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who once fired him.

Gen. Vaughan

In the early stages of the war, Vaughan, then a colonel, was provost marshal in Brisbane, Australia, when MacArthur yanked him out of the job and sent him back to the USA.

Perhaps this was a lucky break for Vaughan since he then attached himself to the Truman Committee, later became aide to the Vice President (though most Vice Presidents don't have aides) and now basks at the feet of the mighty.

However, there has been no love lost between Vaughan and MacArthur since, and apparently President Truman was quite aware of this on the Wake Island flight.

While playing poker en route home, the bemedaled military aide raked in a couple of good pots at Truman's expense, and the President finally got a little peeved.

Do that again, the President snapped at him, and he would be shipped back to Gen. MacArthur for keeps.

Split Personality?

Every so often, President Truman drops a remark indicating that he considers himself a split personality—that there is a difference between Harry Truman, the poker-playing ex-haberdasher and Harry Truman, the President of the United States.

Apparently he feels he can draw a sort of curtain on his official daytime duties and lapse into another personality at night when he relaxes with Harry Vaughan and Gen. Wallace Graham over bourbon and branchwater.

A clue regarding this split personality accidentally dropped the other day when Mr. Truman was talking to a senatorial friend who had come to urge that he confer with Stalin.

The President listened attentively as the Senator urged that no one wants war and that Russia by this time knows we mean business and will not be bullied. "Why don't you arrange to meet Stalin at some neutral place like Berlin or Tehran?" the Senator urged.

That familiar stubborn look immediately blazed in Truman's eyes. He said indignantly that he thought it time that Stalin showed some respect for the United States and stopped treating him like Harry Truman instead of the President of the United States. He said Stalin could come to the U. S. if he had anything to say.

Stassen's Moscow Bid

Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota was campaigning in that State shortly after his fellow Minnesotan Harold Stassen had proposed that he go to Moscow to confer with Stalin.

"One day Stassen gets up and shouts 'Send the atom bomb to Moscow' proclaimed Humphrey. Next day he's back with 'Hold the bomb—Send Harold Stassen to Moscow!'"

Campaign Funds

Latest tabulation of political contributions filed with the Clerk of the House of Represeptatives shows some interesting donations. Here are some of them: Tom Watson, head of International Business Machines, is hedging his bets. Though he is Eisenhower's biggest backstage backer, he also put up $2000 for the Democrats this trip . . . biggest GOP contributor, as usual, was the duPont family of Delaware with $16,000 placed in the Republican kitty . . . biggest Democratic source of revenue were the Jackson Day dinners. The Washington dinner raised $305,000 . . . Other big Democratic contributors were Woodrow Wilson's Ambassador to Germany, James W. Gerard, and his wife, $10,000; Averell Harriman, $5000; Henry Morgenthau, $5000; the Hollywood Schencks (Nick, Joe and Pansy) $8000; Marshall Field, $2000; Sam Goldwyn, $1000; Robert Young of the Chesapeake & Ohio (a Republican), $1000; and "Call Me Madam" Perle Mesta, U. S. Minister to Luxembourg, $1000.

Mrs Roosevelt gave $100 to the Democratic Party, but only three Cabinet members are registered as contributors so far—Postmaster General Donaldson, $200; Secretary of State Acheson, $500; Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, $1000 . . . White House Aide Steve Spingarn, recently elevated to the Federal Trade Commission, gave $1000; and so did Stanley Dollar of San Francisco, a Republican, now suing the U. S. Government to recover the Dollar Steamship Line. Significantly, he gave to the Democrats.

Big Republican contributors were: Robert E. Wood of Sears-Roebuck, former head of America First, $1500; Sewell Avery, head of Montgomery Ward, who once got carried out of his office by United States troops, $1500; John A. Hartford, head of the A & P grocery stores who faces a big antitrust suit, $3000; and three big Chicago meat packers, a total of $[illegible]—E. A. Cudahy, Thomas E. Wilson and the Swift family . . . C. K. Boettcher, the Denver financier, came through with $1000 for the GOP; Erskine R. Myer, another Denverite, $2000; the Pittsburgh Mellon family of Gulf Oil and the Aluminum Corporation, $2000; and Jack Chrysler of the automobile family, $1000 . . . Other Republican contributors of $1000 each were Roger Strauss, the New York financier, and great friend of Tom Dewey's; Mrs. Jacob France of Baltimore, whose husband was once Senator from Maryland.

The Democrats collected $1000 each from former Ambassador Joe Davies; Mrs. Stanley Woodward, whose husband got the prize post of Ambassador to Canada; David K. E. Bruce, the American Ambassador to France; and Morris Cafritz, the big Washington real estate dealer. (In the last election Morris and his wife bet on the Republicans to the tune of $2000) . . . Another interesting $1000 contributor to the Democrats was Milton Kronheim, the big liquor dealer and great friend of General Vaughan's whose son has been made a municipal judge (incidentally, doing a good job) . . . Hollywood Singer Phil Regan and his wife gave the Democrats $2500 though he usually consorts with the Republicans; while Rosalie Bloomingdale of the New York department store and Angier Biddle Duke of the American embassy in Buenos Aires each put up $3000 to the Democrats.

Free elections are your most treasured inheritance as an American citizen! The privilege of voting . . . in this great Nation of ours . . . knows no class distinction. The man in the street and the man in the penthouse . . . the woman in the kitchen and the lady in the drawing room . . . all carry the same weight when they slip their ballot in the box. This is Government by democracy as it was conceived by our forefathers . . . Government that continues to keep America strong in an ailing world. If you live in Maryland or Virginia, or if you are an absentee voter from another state, we earnestly urge you to go to the polls today. Your vote may tip the scales in favor of the legislation of your choice!
